Just say no

AFTER ALMOST a decade of sleaze in the White House, the Republicans have suddenly seized the moral high ground in Washington, and the Democrats are on the defensive.

That's not a good sign — the progressive forces are already having enough problems fighting a right-wing juggernaut on national and foreign policy. If the Republicans can make political ethics into their issue, we're in serious trouble.

The Democrats ought to be talking about Ollie North, Michael Deaver, Ed Meese, John Hull, contra drug-running and the like. But more important, they ought to be acknowledging that the complaints against Wright and Coelho raise serious issues.

The national pattern is now emerging in Sacramento. Suddenly, over the past week, the ethical conduct of Speaker Willie L. Brown Jr. has become a statewide issue (see page 8). And only the Republicans (in the person of GOP Assembly leader Ross Johnson) are taking it on. Johnson is pushing an initiative for 1990 that could create serious problems for the Democratic majority in the Legislature — and he's promoting it as a way to control Brown and his reign of secrecy and sleaze.

But this week San Franciscans have a chance to demonstrate that progressive activists and officials won't tolerate sleaze in high office — from the Democratic speaker of the Assembly or anyone else.

On June 8th at 4 pm, in room 282 City Hall, the City Planning Commission will consider the permit application of a group of investors (mostly out-of-town investors) who want to build a commercial aquarium called Underwater World at Pier 39. Brown is heavily involved in the project, as a private attorney for Underwater World. Meanwhile, as a legislator, he introduced a bill that could have helped remove a major roadblock to the project's approval. Dan Walters, the Sacramento Bee's respected political columnist, calls it the most direct example he's seen to date of the conflict of interest between Brown's roles as a private lawyer and public official.

Brown denies any impropriety. So does John McCosker, the director of the California Academy of Science's Steinhart Aquarium. The aquarium dropped its opposition to Underwater World shortly after Brown introduced legislation to give the academy $2 million a year in state matching funds.

But the entire affair is so cloaked in secrecy it's impossible to tell what the real truth is (see editorial, page 6). The Planning Commission can change that by demanding full disclosure of every document relating to the project, including details of the talks between Brown and McCosker. Some of those may be legally "privileged" as attorney-client communication — but a building permit is also a "privilege," and if the project sponsors and their powerful attorneys don't want to come clean, the commission can Just Say No. It strikes me as a fine way to demonstrate that Mayor Art Agnos and his planning commissioners aren't going to cede the ethical high ground to the likes of Newt Gingrich and Ross Johnson.

An ethics lesson for 'King' Willie

IT'S NO longer enough for Willie L. Brown Jr. to be speaker of the California Assembly. Now he wants to be a king.

A philosopher king, to be exact — like the ones in Plato's Republic.

"Public officials ought to be treated almost like philosopher kings," he told KRON's Rollin Post and Belva Davis in an interview broadcast Sunday, June 4th. "Public officials at every single, solitary level ought to be paid an adequate salary (and) there should be zero remuneration coming to us from any source except the public dollars."

Somehow, though, we suspect that Willie Brown was not the type of leader Plato had in mind when he described his idealized public servant, devoted entirely to the public good and well schooled in logic, epistemology and ethics.

Brown's interest in political ethics seems a little sudden against the background of his year-in, year-out routine: squeezing campaign money out of special interests, hiding controversial actions behind closed doors and using his public office to promote the interests of his private law clients.

Time after time over the past few years, Brown has managed to protect himself and his allies from any serious ethics investigation. With his hometown's two daily newspapers refusing to cover major stories about his ethical transgressions, a Fair Political Practices Commission willing to cut back-room deals with Brown aides and a pair of toothless legislative ethics committees, the speaker has been getting away with the ethical equivalent of first-degree murder.

But suddenly, in the wake of the Coelho and Wright resignations, the media, the public and even a few elected officials in California are beginning to show signs of taking legislative ethics more seriously. Brown may actually be in trouble. For the first time in memory, when he dismissed the Bay Guardian's charges as nonsense on KRON, he was visibly and unmistakably nervous.

The speaker's conduct has suddenly become a significant statewide issue:

- The conflict of interest disclosed in the Bay Guardian last week has become statewide news, picked up by KRON-TV and Sacramento Bee columnist Dan Walters, who called it "the most direct example to date" of Brown's public official-private attorney conflict. Most ominously for Brown, the Chronicle and the Examiner, who have discretely failed to mention or detail his ethics problems in the past, also covered the story.

- According to Walters, the Ventura County District Attorney's Office recently charged that Brown had called a local judge "to put in a good word" for the daughter of Assemblywoman Cathie Wright (R-Simi Valley), who was contesting some traffic tickets.

- The California First Amendment Coalition, a statewide news media organization, has condemned Brown and his cronies for their practice of holding secret meetings to vote themselves perks like increased travel money and better insurance benefits. As Craig McLaughlin reports on page 9, the coalition is pursuing political solutions but has not ruled out a lawsuit.

- Meanwhile, Assemblyman Ross Johnson (R-La Habra) has proposed a ballot initiative to curtail the powers of the speaker and spell out limits on secret meetings of the Legislature.

Inside the Legislature, nobody has raised a finger yet to challenge Brown. Recent conflict-of-interest questions arose from Brown's sponsorship of a bill to allocate $2 million in state money to the California Academy of Sciences (and thus apparently help remove a major roadblock to the waterfront project of his private law client).

But the bill sailed through the Assembly Water, Parks and Wildlife Committee 10-1 April 24th, and won preliminary Ways and Means Committee approval without opposition May 17th.

Both legislative analysts' opinions — at Ways and Means and Water, Parks and Wildlife — failed to mention the Underwater World project, Brown's role in it or the possible conflict in his attorney-legislator position.

Thus far, neither the Assembly Ethics Committee nor the Joint Legislative Committee on Ethics has moved to investigate the matter. Nor have the FPCC, the state Bar Association nor the San Francisco District Attorney's Office.

If Johnson and the Republican leadership in the Assembly want to take on Brown, they should ask the ethics panels to investigate the speaker. If San Francisco DA Arlo Smith wants to make a serious run for attorney general, he should do the same.

And if Brown wants to be a real philosopher king," he can start by coming clean: Give up all the secrecy, disclose the precise nature of his dealings with private law clients, and tell his constituents once and for all who comes first — the people of San Francisco, who elected him to office, or a handful of wealthy private law clients, who keep him in Ferarri Testarosas and Wilkes Bashford suits. ■

Fear of fusion

Thank you for your analysis of the uncritical press hysteria over desktop fusion (Bay Guardian 5/17/89). Anyone with a passing acquaintance with physics and history would know that the release of unlimited energy within the biosphere for human ends would quickly make the planet uninhabitable. Wagner, among others, wrote eloquently about what happens to people possessed of seemingly infinite power.

One such person is William Randolph Hearst, Jr. I don't know whether anyone other than Phyllis Schlafly takes his demented pontifications seriously, but from his inherited eminence, Hearst says what others can only dream. In his Sunday column of April 16th, the press lord offered several cheerful prospects for fusion-in-a-jar. "There have been predictions that it would make nuclear weapons obsolete, and so much cheaper to produce," he wrote. "It has been claimed that fusion power would be non-radioactive and thus its use to replace nuclear weapons would not contaminate the earth and oceans in the event of a new world war."

Hearst articulates what writers Stallone and Van Scoy surmise might be the real use of cold fusion, if it is found to be feasible. Destroy the earth, but do it cheaply and cleanly.

Sexism at home

Laura Fraser's insightful "Press Box" piece on the absence of women as journalists and subjects of journalism (Bay Guardian, 5/31/89) hit home in more ways than one. Discrimination in journalism occurs not only in the major, money-making papers, but also in our own dear Bay Guardian. In the very issue in which Ms. Fraser railed on male-dominated news corporations, 16 of the Bay Guardian's stories and editorials were by men, while only seven were by women. On closer inspection, the men wrote stories on serious subjects: the DA probe of the Berkeley rent board, audio engineering and the dangerous position for journalists in El Salvador, as well as the cover story on the aquarium conspiracy. Women, on the other hand, wrote about child-care groups, food, films and dance.

Let's demand change from our supposedly alternative papers before we tackle the major, corporate ones.

Martha Mazon

Development's cornerstone

I am strongly opposed to the South of Market Business Association's representation of the Cornerstone Conference as a "first ever gathering of those who live, work or have an interest in the South of Market." Many of the panels are clearly unrepresentative of the South of Market community as a whole, especially those dealing with commercial development and service/light industry. These two panels are heavily stacked against the community by commercial office developers. The entire conference demonstrates SOMBA's continuing commitment to allow office development throughout the entire South of Market area.

SOMBA claims that this conference initiates a "bridge-building process," but it has completely ignored vast segments of the SOMA residents and workers and business people. Besides the more than 10,000 low- and fixed-income residents, few of whom could afford the $145 registration fee, there is a thriving light and service industry, an arts community and countless small businesses, all of which will be adversely affected by SOMBA's large development and business interests.

Additionally, the timing of the conference is suspect as an obvious attempt by SOMBA to affect the outcome of the South of Market zoning controls, which are due for consideration by the Plan-

City Editor Tim Redmond responds: The five women and five men on our editorial staff have always believed that child care is a serious subject — certainly as important, for example, as audio engineering. We think Laura Fraser's press criticism is pretty serious stuff, too.

For the record

In last week's article on the Underwater World aquarium project, attorney Sue Hestor was incorrectly identified as representing San Franciscans for Reasonable Growth. Hestor represents four Fisherman's Wharf businesses that oppose the project. They are the Cannery, the Anchorage, Franciscan and Alioto's.

In our superlist of 5/31/89 we mistakenly listed the Planned Parenthood clinic in the Financial District as a low-cost health clinic that performs abortions. No abortions are performed at the clinic. In addition, the Haight-Ashbury Free Acupuncture Clinic was not listed. Its hours are Tues. and Thurs., 9 am-1 pm, 431-1714.

Aquarium: A flood of questions

THE UNDERWATER World project is by now swimming in questions: About the role Assembly Speaker Willie L. Brown Jr. played in convincing the Academy of Sciences to drop its opposition to the project, about the full list of the project's investors, about the deal Brown and the project sponsors cut with the academy.

With all these questions afloat, the San Francisco City Planning Commission has only one reasonable course of action when the project comes before it June 8th:

Tell the Underwater World crew to make available to the public, immediately, all information about every aspect of the project. And refuse to consider the case until they comply.

The project would have a major impact on San Francisco. It would involve millions of dollars in city and state funds and could significantly change the future of an educational institution that operates on city property and the fate of a neighborhood that is both a major tourist area and the home of some of the city's last commercial fisheries.

And the list of questions is extensive:

- What did Brown and John McCosker, the director of the Steinhart Aquarium, discuss at the two meetings held in Brown's law office?
- Did McCosker have a lawyer review the final agreement? Who was the lawyer, and what was his or her opinion? How was the deal presented to the academy's board of directors, and what was the vote of that board? Why all the secrecy?

- Is a subsidiary of the San Francisco Chronicle one of the investors in the project, as reported in the Chronicle June 5th? How much has that company invested and when did it get involved? Why is there no mention of this fact on any of the public records pertaining to the project? Are there any other secret investors? Who?

- Did Brown know about the Chron's involvement? Did that business relationship affect the way the local dailies, the Chron and its JOA business partner, the Examiner, have until this week refused to cover this issue?

- Did Planning Director Dean Macris know about the Chron's role in the project? Was he privy to the details of the academy/Brown/Underwater World deal? If so, why hasn't he made any of that information public?

There are serious problems with the Underwater World proposal (traffic, economic impacts, political sleaze, etc.) that have been laid out in the Bay Guardian over the past two weeks. But the single most serious problem can be summed up in one word: secrecy.

The Planning Commission can and should demand answers to all of the lingering questions — and if the project sponsors or their lawyers stall, stonewall or make excuses (like "attorney-client privilege"), the commission can — and should — send these highbinders packing. ■

Honor thy Congress:

Honoraria — fees for speeches, appearances or articles — are an easy way for members of Congress to augment their salaries — and an easy way for special interests to funnel money to senators and representatives in a position to aid their legislative agenda. Fred Wertheimer, president of Common Cause, calls it "legalized graft."

Common Cause recently released the honoraria totals reported last month. It found that 95 senators kept more than $2 million in honoraria during 1988. On the House side, 91 of the 379 representatives included in the study kept $2.4 million for their personal use.

California's senior senator, Alan Cranston, made and kept $21,900. Its junior senator, Pete Wilson, made and kept $29,846. Of the Bay Area congressional delegation, Barbara Boxer made $14,500, Ronald Dellums (who is on record as supporting a congressional ban on honoraria) made $22,745. Nancy Pelosi made only $2,000 and gave it all to charity.

Ollie the orator: Lieutenant Colonel Oliver North, USMC, is retired, but he's still making a killing. Only now, instead of supplying arms with which Contras commit atrocities against Nicaraguan civilians (the atrocities continue but North is now out of the loop), he's raking in big bucks (estimates range from $10,000 to $50,000 a pop) on the lecture circuit. And on Wednesday/14, Ollie brings his personal brand of constitutional sabotage to the Circle Star Center (formerly the Circle Star Theater) in San Carlos. Tickets for the 11 am speech and forum are $17.50.

With the press announcement of the event came an Ollie North bio full of Cold War rhetoric and there-oughta-be-a-law deceptions. To wit:

"He was involved in planning the liberation of Grenada from Marxist tyranny and the rescue of 804 medical students. . . . He later helped plan the U.S. raid on Qaddafi's terrorist training camps in Libya. . . . But Oliver North's most enduring legacy is the indispensable role he played in carrying out the president's orders to support freedom and democracy in Central America."

BROWN'S ETHICS CONFLICT FUELS STATEWIDE CONTROVERSY

THE LATEST Willie Brown conflict of interest, involving a commercial aquarium project at Fisherman's Wharf, has exploded into a statewide controversy that may represent the most serious threat yet to Brown's ability to continue using his position as an elected official to benefit his private law clients.

Brown continues to dismiss the importance of the issue, telling KRON's Rollin Post and Belva Davis in an interview televised June 4th that the accusations against him are all the work of the "tabloid journalism" crowd and asking, "Who reads the Bay Guardian, anyway?"

Unfortunately for Brown, Dan Walters, the Sacramento Bee's respected political columnist, is one of those readers. In a June 2nd column, Walters quoted the Bay Guardian's May 31st report on Brown's aquarium conflict and noted, "It's precisely the sort of issue that sunk Jim Wright and Tony Coelho. . . . And it's precisely the sort of issue that a real [state legislative] ethics committee, enforcing a real code of ethics, probably would investigate if they existed."

Brown, as a private attorney, is representing Underwater World, a consortium of investors that wants to build a massive aquatic tourist trap at Pier 39. Until recently, a major obstacle to the project, which comes before the Planning Commission June 8th, was opposition from the California Academy of Sciences, which operates the nonprofit Steinhart Aquarium in Golden Gate Park.

The academy argued that Underwater World would siphon off its visitors (and thus cut its revenue). A city study concluded that annual losses could reach $400,000.

So Brown met twice in his law office with Steinhart's director, John McCosker. After those meetings, Brown introduced AB 1580, a bill that would give the academy $2 million in matching state funds. Underwater World also agreed to pay Steinhart $200,000 a year for eight years. The academy dropped its opposition.

Brown insists that nothing he did in the Legislature had any impact on the academy's decision to stop fighting Underwater World. McCosker also insists that there was no "quid pro quo."

But as of press time, the academy had not provided documents the Bay Guardian has requested that might show whether McCosker and Brown are telling the whole truth: the agreement between the academy and Underwater World, the minutes or notes of the meetings between Brown and McCosker, the minutes of the meeting at which McCosker says the academy board of directors approved the agreement and all written communication between Brown, the academy and the sponsors of Underwater World.

To use Walters' terminology, those are precisely the sort of documents a serious legislative ethics committee, or an effective Fair Political Practices Commission, would demand and review. But as of press time, the Assembly Select Committee on Ethics, the Joint Legislative Ethics Committee, the FPPC, the Attorney General's Office and San Francisco District Attorney Arlo Smith all had failed to return Bay Guardian phone calls requesting comment on the Brown conflict. None had announced plans to pursue the matter.

Surprisingly, however, the Examiner and Chronicle, which have consistently ignored major ethical problems involving Brown, both ran fairly lengthy stories June 5th on the aquarium battle. Neither Steve Massey's report in the Chronicle nor Gerald Adams' in the Examiner gave the Bay Guardian credit for breaking the story, and Massey's article relegated the entire Brown conflict to three paragraphs, but at least the daily papers didn't black the story out entirely.

In fact, Massey's story contained a fascinating new revelation: A firm called Chronicle Ventures, a subsidiary of Chronicle Publishing, is among the investors in Underwater World.

That information startled both supporters and opponents of the project, as well as the journalists who have been covering it. Post told the Bay Guardian he had known nothing about the Chronicle's involvement in the project when he and Davis interviewed Brown, although KRON is owned by Chronicle Publishing.

Even Massey said the information had surprised him. "I knew nothing about it," he told the Bay Guardian. "I turned my story in, and a couple of hours later, [Executive Editor] Bill German called to tell me that the Chronicle had an interest in the project, and that he was going to insert language acknowledging that fact."

German wasn't at work Monday. Phelps Dewey, assistant to Publisher Richard Thieriot, did not return Bay Guardian phone calls seeking information on Chronicle Ventures' involvement in the project and on the firm's other investments.

Art Blum, a publicist representing Underwater World, said he was mystified, too: "I knew nothing about any involvement by the Chronicle until I read it in the paper," he told the Bay Guardian.

Nothing in the public documents on file with city agencies on the Underwater World project mentions Chronicle Ventures.

So as the project heads for its first Planning Commission hearing, the situation is only getting more confusing. And the commission has an even greater responsibility to demand that all of the secret information be released and discussed in public before the project goes another step forward.

BERKELEY HOMELESS GROUP SETTLES EVICION SUIT

MEMBERS OF the Tenth Street Homeless Collective have settled out of court their lawsuit over their alleged illegal eviction last year. In their settlement with their former landlord, Hamilton Savings Bank, and the City of Berkeley, the collective accepted $30,000 from the bank and an explicit policy directive from the city on how police will deal with landlord/tenant disputes in the future.

The suit, brought by attorneys Ted Bloom and Jim Chanin, alleged that the bank and the city violated the collective's civil rights when 25 Berkeley

'[I]t's precisely the sort of issue that a real ethics committee, enforcing a real code of ethics, probably would investigate if they existed.'

— Dan Walters,
Sacramento Bee, June 2nd.

police removed them, in a dawn raid March 8, 1988, from the house they had been living in for 18 months.

The suit also charged the bank with violation of the collective's tenant rights, specifically an illegal landlord lockout, forcible entry and forcible detainer.

The eviction came after many months of neighborhood problems (see Bay Guardian, 3/16/88). The collective was using the house as a shelter organized by and for homeless people. Neighbors' complaints of noise, garbage and overcrowding eventually culminated in one frustrated neighbor allegedly throwing firebombs into a couple of shacks in the collective's backyard — and at one of its members.

Chanin called the settlement a victory. "We met the target of the amount of money we thought the case was worth, given the way the courts measure these things," he said. "We wanted vindication and we got it."

Henry Hewitt, the attorney representing Hamilton Savings Bank, told the Bay Guardian, "The costs of an ongoing and complicated lawsuit, including claims by the city against the bank, meant it made more sense to settle than to litigate."

Another victory, Chanin said, was the policy statement the city has accepted as part of the settlement. It instructs police officers that while they must effect a citizen's arrest for trespassing if a property owner insists, "the arrestee shall not be physically removed" if the occupant can produce any evidence of tenancy, such as "a written lease, rent receipts, keys to the premises, utility bills or furniture and other possessions indicating long-term tenancy."

"We got this injunctive relief which in my mind makes it clear that what the city did was wrong," said Chanin.

But Marjorie Gelb of the Berkeley City Attorney's Office told the Bay Guardian that although there is nothing in the new directive that isn't already law, its inclusion as part of the settlement is not an admission of guilt. The city claims to be innocent of all wrongdoing and contends the bank deceived city officials by calling the tenants trespassers.

Bloom, however, charged the eviction was politically motivated. "You don't get together that many cops and think you're not doing something special. We depose the cops involved. They called it Operation Dawn Patrol. They got 25 cops together and had briefings. Where else have they done this for a citizen's arrest?"

NO LAWSUIT ON LEGISLATIVE SECRECY — FOR NOW

THE CALIFORNIA First Amendment Coalition has decided for now not to file a suit against the state Legislature for failing to abide by open meetings laws. But in a statement released May 31st, CFAC President Mel Opatowsky raised the threat of a future lawsuit if a political solution to the problem of secret meetings is not found.

"We hope — we expect — to see action soon, so that we do not have to call upon the courts to make the legislature obey the law," said Opatowsky, senior managing editor of the Press-Enterprise of Riverside County.

Meanwhile, a legislator has submitted to the attorney general a proposed ballot initiative that would, among other things, amend the state Constitution to ban closed legislative meetings except under very specific circumstances.

CFAC had considered a suit against the Legislature after a series of San Jose Mercury News reports that the Legislature was holding closed-door meetings in violation of Proposition 24, the Legislative Reform Act approved by the voters in 1984. The Los Angeles Times reported May 17th that members of the Senate and the Assembly have met behind closed doors at least 93 times since 1987 to vote themselves more than $1 million in benefits.

However, the coalition's advisory panel of media lawyers — many of whom regularly represent large daily newspapers — recommended that the coalition first pursue a political solution. Some of them noted that a lawsuit would worsen already strained relations between the Legislature and the media (see Bay Guardian, 5/31/89).

Opatowsky told the Bay Guardian he is planning to meet June 9th with members of the Central Chapter of the Society of Professional Journalists to discuss ways of pressuring the Legislature to comply with open-meetings laws. The SPJ chapter has been meeting with members of Senate President Pro Tem David Roberti's staff in an attempt to change the Legislature's rules of procedure.

Roberti's press secretary, Bob Forsyth, told the Bay Guardian last week that any rule change would probably only affect the Senate Rules Committee. But Daniel Carson, the Central Chapter's president, told the Bay Guardian, "We're continuing to discuss the matter with Roberti's office. We think they're still making a good-faith examination of the situation."

If attempts to lobby the Legislature fail, CFAC may consider suing the Legislature on the grounds that closed sessions violate the federal constitution. Edward Davis and Judy Alexander — lawyers in the San Jose office of Pillsbury, Madison and Sutro, which represents the Mercury News — have prepared and sent to Opatowsky a sample brief arguing that the First Amendment requires that the press and the public have access to legislative proceedings.

Alexander told the Bay Guardian that a federal constitutional lawsuit would take existing rulings that give the press and the public access to the courts and apply them to the legislative process.

She said a lawsuit based on the U.S. Constitution would avoid a defense based on the separation of powers between the Legislature and state judiciary. It would also preclude the Legislature from defusing a lawsuit by simply changing its joint rules or state law to permit secret sessions, she said.

Alexander said Davis and she had not recommended CFAC pursue a lawsuit. That, she said, is the role of the CFAC advisory panel. But she did say, "We both recommended that it merits consideration."

If the question of legislative secrecy is not ultimately resolved in the courts, it may be resolved at the ballot box. On May 19th, Assemblyman Ross Johnson (R-La Habra) submitted to the attorney general for review a proposal virtually identical to Prop. 24 except that it includes provisions to amend the state Constitution. If the measure garners enough signatures, it would appear on the June 1990 ballot.

GAY MATTERS

Gay in America: The behind-the-bylines story

By David Israels

NEWSPAPER REPORTERS, who usually seem to cherish their reputation for lack of sentimentality, don't often talk about a story they've completed as a "labor of love."

But, corny as it sounds, that's just how Elizabeth Fernandez says she and most of her two dozen colleagues feel about their work on the San Francisco Examiner's "Gay in America" series, now unfolding in your Sunday and afternoon newspaper.

In Bay Guardian interviews with a half dozen of the 25 or so reporters and editors assigned to the project, an intriguing behind-the-bylines story emerged.

A year in the making, the unprecedented series places the social, political and cultural life of America's homosexual citizenry under the microscope of journalistic examination. But it's more than just a gay series, project editor Carol Ness said. "It's really about the uneasy intersection between gay and straight society."

Greg Brock, the Examiner's openly gay assistant managing editor for news, said some 65 stories will make up the 16-day series. It will fill at least 46 newspaper pages, he said. And it cost "in excess of $100,000," not counting salaries for 60 staffers, who logged 50,000 hours on the project, said Frank McCulloch, Examiner managing editor.

Raul Ramirez, a reporter and editor on the series, said journalists in other cities were astounded to learn that the Examiner was putting time and effort into this subject. "I'd go to other cities and describe it to journalists and get blank looks," he said.

McCulloch said management doesn't expect it to be a circulation booster. He speculated that the gay series may even cause the paper to lose some readers. Some may object, for example, to the planned photo-essay on lesbian motherhood, which includes a picture of a gay woman, lesbian lover by her side, giving birth to their child.

But the Ex, which is stuck in the low-circulation afternoon slot, is trying to build a journalistic reputation that extends beyond its relatively limited readership. Whatever the impact on circulation, however, the series is almost certain to attract attention.

THE PROJECT was born last spring with a suggestion from gay media consultant Ken Maley. He proposed a major gay project to coincide with the 20th anniversary of the June 27th-29th Stonewall rebellion, which marks the beginning of the gay liberation movement.

During the next five months, Examiner staff shepherded the idea through three more incarnations. In the end, two concepts shaped the project: That it tell the story of gay men and lesbians "through their eyes and voices," as Ness wrote in the final proposal. And that it not reinforce the stereotype that the community is primarily gay white urban men, Ness said.

What's more, management and staffers agreed the emphasis should not be on AIDS. "We had to be careful that AIDS didn't overwhelm the project," McCulloch said.

The uneasy intersection between gay and straight society was also evident within the Examiner. Although project reporters encouraged their gay sources to be completely open, at least two key newsroom gays say they still don't feel comfortable letting readers or contacts for news know they're gay.

One of them said, "It would be a barrier with some of my sources. I suspect that's the good reason. Maybe I'm also not comfortable being publicly out — I haven't gotten there." Brock, however, said the series will have salutary effects at the Ex. "There's no turning back now in-house. The gays here will always be able to be themselves if they choose to."

Besides himself, Brock said, there are several other open gays on the editorial side (Lon Daniels, Bill Kong, Gary Linn, Elizabeth Mangelsdorf, Michael O'Loughlin and Barry Walters).

But it was mostly newsroom politics, rather than homophobia, that motivated the minority of editors and reporters who objected to the series, staffers said.

"It comes from what historically has been a divided newsroom," Brock said. "It's very territorial here."

Perhaps the most glaring example occurred when one department head, ignoring management instructions, refused to let his reporters use the department's travel budget for series-related expenses, according to two project staffers.

But a subtle brand of anti-gay feeling also played a role in some people's objections, McCulloch said.

Two reporters, for example, wrote a memo that said the series should address questions such as "do [gays] even have the right to have [civil freedoms] any more, given the AIDS epidemic?"

Though the reporters did not appear to be advocating the point of view of their questions, one senior editor insisted the memo "had an underlying tone of homophobia." Neither reporter worked on the series.

As the project neared completion, McCulloch said, at the Examiner there "was probably less than universal enthusiasm but a great deal of acceptance."

And as Brock and other editors wrestled to fit the mountain of words into the allotted space, their eyes were fixed on the reaction of the outside world. "In the industry, I think it will be perceived as an enormously gutsy project," Brock said. "I don't know any other paper that would even attempt it."

This Week AT CITY HALL

BY JIM BALDERSTON

DISASTER OF THE WEEK

Governor George Deukmejian has proposed eliminating the Office of Family Planning from the state's 1990 budget. In addition to the vast personal cost to thousands of women forced into unwanted pregnancies, the resulting financial cost to the state would be many times the amount that closing the OFP would save.

The elimination of the state-wide office, which provides family planning, health services and contraceptives to low-income women, would save a mere $36.2 million in the state's $50 billion yearly budget.

But the impact of eliminating the OFP would be immense. The agency served more than half a million people last year and provided even more with educational material — mostly minorities and low-income families.

For many of these people, the OFP is the last-resort family-planning care provider. Uninsured, unable to pay high medical costs, the OFP's clientele will be left with absolutely no family planning resources.

Perhaps Deukmejian and his merry budget cutters believe this move makes good fiscal sense. But the evidence shows just the opposite. Two separate studies, conducted in the early 1980s, state that each dollar invested in OFP and its contraceptive services created a savings to the state of $6 that would otherwise have to pay for prenatal, delivery and infant-care costs. A 1989 study estimated the savings at more than $11.

OFP estimates that if its offices are closed, some 98,000 unwanted pregnancies will occur within one year, statewide. The additional strain on the state health-care system will be considerable. Each pregnancy costs approximately $3,320, bringing total costs of closing the OFP to over $325 million per year.

That's right. Deukmejian's $36 million dollar savings will end up costing the state $325 million a year — almost $1 million a day.

After discovering a budget surplus, Deukmejian decided to fund all programs he had proposed cutting — except for OFP and one other entitlement program. Meredith Cahn, Director of the Women's Need Center on Haight St., told the Bay Guardian the elimination of the OFP will force her office to cut back its service by two-thirds. "We see 3,000 women a year, and we will have to cut that to 1,000 because of the cuts," she said.

Cahn said 80 percent of her clients have no medical insurance and earn less than $12,000 a year.

Cahn said the irony of the governor's position is hard to ignore. "While everyone is worried about the Webster case, [the abortion case currently before the Supreme Court] people are forgetting that family planning prevents more unwanted pregnancies and abortions than any other service."

Good-bye, Bill

BILL PAUL, a veteran local gay activist and general hell-raiser, died Monday, May 29th, after a long battle with AIDS.

Paul was well known in local political circles, and most recently served as president of the Stonewall Gay Democratic Club. But he received much wider attention when he filed charges with the Office of Citizen Complaints against four senior San Francisco police inspectors who, he alleged, had bungled the investigation of the homicide of a gay man, George Smoot — because of Smoot's homosexuality, Paul charged. The OCC sustained the charges against the four officers, and the Police Commission (somewhat reluctantly) is finally hearing the case. But it's frustrating and ironic that the officers' lawyers have managed to delay the case so long that Paul didn't live to see the outcome. Paul's complaint was filed in 1987. The OCC released its finding nine months ago.

The attorneys for the four officers have exasperated the city's legal staff with an array of legal motions that slowed the progress of the case. But the commission is also at fault: Even after the legal questions had been settled, it allowed the case to be pushed back on the calendar.

By all rights, Paul's death should have no effect on the disciplinary hearing — his testimony was videotaped, over the strenuous objection of the officers' attorneys. But it will be up to his friends and allies to keep up the political pressure on the commission, to ensure that Paul's complaint, at least, has its proverbial day in court.

The Smoot controversy is a fitting testimonial to what Bill Paul stood for. The case is unabashedly political, as was Paul. From the start, it's been tough and controversial — the cross-examination Paul faced during his videotaped testimony was nasty and brutal — but he was always up to the task. Few other people could have endured the hostility and pressure that have been standard fare throughout the case.

I'll always remember Bill sitting on the grass outside the Hall of Justice, after a Police Commission meeting in which he'd informed the commissioners, in no uncertain terms, that there were serious problems with the Smoot investigation. "They are so goddamn hypocritical!" he shouted repeatedly, waving his arms and lighting up another cigarette.

Then he threw back his head and laughed.

Hold the Chianti

THE SAN Francisco Community College District Governing Board canceled a closed meeting scheduled for Tuesday, May 30th at a North Beach restaurant after a Bay Guardian reporter informed board members that he and a photographer would also be dining at the restaurant that evening.

The meeting of the seven-member board was planned for Fior D'Italia. On the agenda was the renewal of Chancellor Hilary Hsu's contract, according to several board members.

Hsu, however, abruptly canceled the meeting just hours before it was to take place. Board members told me Hsu had explained that the meeting would not be held because a Bay Guardian reporter was challenging the secret session and had promised to show up at the restaurant with a photographer.

The incident is the latest in a long tradition of Community College Board secrecy and backroom dealings. The board spends the highest percentage of its time in closed sessions of any city agency.

The board's taste in restaurants is not as bad as its taste for secrecy, according to Bay Guardian restaurant critic Janet Hazen, but, she added, the choice hardly showed a bold spirit of adventure. Hazen told me that Fior D'Italia is "a safe, old-fashioned, traditional Italian restaurant."

Renne at CADC

SAN FRANCISCO City Attorney Louise Renne is out on the campaign trail, pressing her re-election bid. She will be stumping at the Chinese American Democratic Club on Thursday, June 8th. Club members might want to ask Renne about the failure of her office to promote and enforce open meetings and public records laws. (Why, for example, is virtually all of the communication between her office and other city agencies kept secret?) The meeting begins at 7:30 pm, at the Chinatown YMCA, 855 Sacramento.

New complaint in Huerta case

DOLORES HUERTA's attorney, Dianna Lyons, has filed a new complaint against the San Francisco Police Department with the Office of Citizen Complaints.

The complaint centers on the removal of a document from officer Francis Achim's personnel file, an incident the Police Department and the OCC are both already investigating.

Huerta, vice-president of the United Farm Workers, was seriously injured during a demonstration last fall. The Office of Citizen Complaints charged that Achim used unnecessary force in striking Huerta with his riot baton, but Chief Frank Jordan declined to pursue disciplinary action.

Port to waive rent?

SAN FRANCISCO Port Director Michael Huerta has asked that the city waive $257,000 in rent from Crowley Maritime, one of the city's largest shipping companies. Crowley has 25 months left on a 15-year lease at Pier 9. But the firm is moving out, and wants the city to write off the remaining rent, according to a June 5th report from the Board of Supervisors budget analyst.

We're not talking about a charity case here: Crowley Maritime recently sold its Red and White ferry fleet to a competitor for an estimated $30 million, and has been active in the Alaskan oil spill clean-up efforts. The company also operates the largest tugboat- and barge-handling operation in the world.

The budget analyst's report recommends against forgiving the final months of the lease, at least until a new tenant is found for the Pier 9 site. "If and when documentation is presented to the Board of Supervisors that the Port has obtained leases which will result in revenues to the Port being at least equal to those revenues presently being received from Crowley, the Budget Analyst then endorses the forgiveness of the remaining months," the report states.

This week at City Hall appears weekly in the Bay Guardian. Tips, information and suggestions for upcoming events and items can be sent in care of Jim Balderston, Bay Guardian, 2700 19th St., SF 94110, or leave a message at 824-8352.

Ethnic TV: Quality news on a budget

By Reese Erlich

THE MAJORITY of the population of the Bay Area's largest cities is now Third World, but you wouldn't know it from watching local TV news. The major TV channels cover drug raids and racial incidents in African-American, Latino and Asian neighborhoods, but the day-to-day news of these communities is too often neglected.

A growing number of minority-language TV stations are now filling part of the gap with stories the major media miss. Some of them provide better local news than the Bay Area's big-budget media conglomerates.

Let's take a look at two of the Bay Area's better minority-language TV news programs: Channel 26's Chinese News at 9, and Channel 48's Spanish-language Noticiero 48.

San Francisco's Channel 26 (KTSF) is a commercial station broadcasting in 15 languages. On Feb. 6th, it started a half-hour news program in Cantonese, the language spoken by most immigrants from Hong Kong and southern China, with a radio simulcast in China's other major language, Mandarin.

I visited the KTSF studio, and believe me—we're talking limited resources. The anchor's makeup room consists of a portable Clairol True-to-Light makeup mirror.

KTSF provided Chinese News at 9 with an initial $400,000 a year budget, compared to millions spent for news by the major stations. Chinese News airs one-half hour, five nights a week. It has only two anchors/reporters, one other reporter and one cameraman.

With these limited resources, co-anchor Mei-Ling Sze said, the program is trying to bring a different kind of news to the Bay Area's 300,000 Chinese-speaking people. English-language TV news, she said, neglects the more than 30 percent of San Francisco's population that is Chinese.

"We usually get covered only when there's racial tension," Sze told the Bay Guardian. She said local TV stations should devote more time to immigration issues and the impact of Asians replacing Caucasians as the city's largest population group.

Chinese News at 9 provides a variety of local, national and international coverage with a particular focus on Asian issues. It receives satellite video from both Taiwan and China, and devotes between eight and ten minutes a night to local news.

Even with its limited budget, it's already scored several scoops.

In February the University of California Medical School announced plans to use an extract of a Chinese herbal medicine to help AIDS patients. Sze was the first to contact the Chinese University in Hong Kong and report that doctors there are testing 27 other Chinese herbal medicines as potential AIDS cures, although none is yet ready for human testing.

Chinese News was also the first TV news show to report that a U.S. immigration judge granted political asylum to a man claiming persecution for violating the People's Republic of China's one-child policy. The case stirred controversy because the immigration department fears a flood of new refugees if the decision is upheld on appeal.

Mabel Teng, co-chair of the Chinese Progressive Association, told the Bay Guardian Channel 26 provides better local community news than the major TV stations.

"I am very impressed," says Teng. "They give much better coverage to issues of immigration, Chinese community organizations' activities and educational rights."

In the South Bay, another relative newcomer, Channel 48's (KSTS) Spanish-language news, also aggressively reports on community issues often neglected both by the major media and by Channel 14 (KDTV), the area's largest Spanish-language TV station. While Channel 14 has been on the air for 15 years, KSTS began its 6 pm news in January 1988 and the 11 pm show in February 1989.

Viewers seem to appreciate a focus on community news. According to November 1988 ratings sweeps, Channel 48 has already attracted 72,000 viewers, while Channel 14 news pulls 180,000. Both have outdistanced the South Bay's largest English-language local station, Channel 8 (KSBW), with 60,000 viewers for its 6 pm news.

As the up-and-coming Spanish-language station, Channel 48 chooses to focus on "grassroots Hispanic news," said Dante Betteo, KSTS news director and co-anchor. For example, it provided excellent coverage of how the San Jose city government tore down the Chicano barrio in Alviso, an issue not covered elsewhere.

KPFA radio Public Affairs Co-director Chuy Varela agreed that Channel 48 is better and more aggressive than Channel 14.

"Channel 14 covers the obvious issues such as immigration," said Varela. "But they focus on business people, not grassroots, down-to-the-people kind of stories. Channel 48 is also more open to progressive viewpoints."

On one recent 11 pm broadcast, Noticiero 48's third story was the Pledge of Resistance takeover of Coit Tower to protest lack of press coverage of El Salvador. Immediately following was the Third World student sit-in at the Stanford President's Office, including extensive coverage of the student viewpoint.

"We're interested in minority, especially Hispanic, concerns in the Bay Area," explained Betteo, "so we put them near the beginning of the show. We have better contacts in the community and we can also concentrate more resources on those issues."

For international news, Channel 48 relies mainly on satellite feeds from a joint effort by the Spanish language Telemundo news network based in Miami and Ted Turner's CNN. Telemundo/CNN's coverage often parallels the quality and political content of CNN's English-language reporting, with one notable exception.

During the Panama crisis, most U.S. networks joined the Bush Administration drumbeat of calls for Noriega's immediate ouster, speculating on the possibility of outright U.S. military intervention. Telemundo/CNN's reports strongly criticized the Panamanian elections, but allowed greater voice to Panamanians opposed to U.S. financing of the opposition party and opposed to U.S. military intervention. Latin American reporters often have a greater sensitivity to defending their countries' national sovereignty and to opposing U.S. intervention.

There's one final aspect of both Channel 26 and Channel 48 news that I really like. The weather reports are simple and straightforward. An announcer gives you the day's temperatures and tomorrow's forecast. No fancy-shmancy, four-color charts; no jerky satellite photos of swirling clouds signifying nothing; no insipid banter.

Betteo said the station doesn't have the resources for a fancy weather segment and isn't sure he would pour money into one even if it did. I hope the station takes a hint from me: Don't.

Channels 26 and 48 fill a special need to provide news in minority languages. They also have the luxury of concentrating their local news on one particular community. But another reason for the quality of their coverage is simply that they, more than the mainstream media, realize the importance of covering the Third World communities.

Major TV stations can learn a lot from their smaller competitors.

Michael Hennessey: 'I don't arrest them, I just have to take care of them.'

A new SF jail?

Sheriff Michael Hennessey's proposal for a new jail facility has touched off a debate over the future of criminal-justice policy in San Francisco

By Jim Balderston

AFTER YEARS of resisting, Sheriff Michael Hennessey has finally proposed to spend some $40 million in state and local funds to expand San Francisco's dilapidated and overcrowded county jail system.

Hennessey, who has long sided with foes of jail construction and supporters of alternatives to incarceration, says he can no longer tolerate the inhumane conditions at San Francisco's two main jail facilities. He has joined with former foes like District Attorney Arlo Smith and the Police Department in calling for the construction of as many as 600 new beds to house the growing population of inmates sent to the Bryant Street lockup and the San Bruno jail by aggressive police officers and heavy-handed judges.

Opposing Hennessey are some of the folks he once counted as his strongest allies — Public Defender Jeff Brown, Supervisor Nancy Walker and the Department of Public Health, who argue, as the sheriff has argued in the past, that the solution to jail overcrowding lies in better police practices and alternative sentencing programs, not in new jail construction.

Hennessey's proposal has set off a heated behind-the-scenes battle that ultimately will determine not just the mates than it can hold. Many more than this number could be treated better in alternative programs.

- Maintaining a larger new jail would cost the already-strained city budget between $15 million and $20 million a year.
- Maintaining a new jail would divert funds from lower-cost, more-effective community-based programs.

- More jail inmates would require major federally-mandated health services, pulling funds from desperately underfunded city health programs.

- A 12-unit apartment building occupies the leading proposed site. Dislocation of tenants and loss of housing units would be additional costs of the new jail.

SUPERVISOR WALKER told the Bay Guardian one of the main reasons for jail overcrowding is the lack of alternative programs for "nuisance" offenders like public drunks or mentally ill individuals. "There are a lot of people the police take to the jail because there is no other place to put them," she said. "There is a significant number of people in the county jail because they have mental health, drug- or alcohol-related problems."

Walker said the jail overcrowding numbers are not insurmountable. "Today I received the sheriff's report on the jail population and it said that the jails are 73 people over capacity," she said. "We ought to be able to solve that size of a problem."

Walker also noted that the implementation of alternative programs will address many of the problems a new jail would, only more quickly. If the city decides to build a new jail, "We're not going have anything completed for two to three years," she said. "It is much faster to provide alternatives than it is to do major construction."

Vincent Schiraldi, director of the National Center on Institutions and Alternatives, a private, nonprofit corporation that promotes alternatives to incarceration, echoed Walker's sentiments. He argued that it would be very easy to solve the jail overcrowding problems that have fueled the move to build a new jail. "I have taken a look at a variety of options that could save the need for 400 to 500 beds in the system," he said. "Those alternatives would save $8.9 million that would have to be spent in incarceration costs."

Schiraldi said the alternatives he has developed would cost $5.8 million a year for between 400 and 500 inmates, as opposed to the nearly $15 million it costs to incarcerate them.

Schiraldi's list included residential programs for drug offenders, an improved pre-trial release program and others. Schiraldi estimated the new 600-bed facility proposed by Hennessey would cost somewhere around $15 million per year. And that money, he said, would never be available for other programs. "When you put money into jails, you can't put it into alternatives," he said.

Public Defender Brown also opposes the construction of the new jail, citing the high number of crack cocaine cases that are clogging the criminal justice system. "One in four arrests is crack-related, and a lot of those end up in the jail system," he said. "There are other ways to intervene in the communities to prevent that."

Schiraldi echoed that sentiment. "What it comes down to is — what are we doing for our children?" he said. "Do we build them jails or schools?"

Brown also said the cost of the jail would be prohibitively expensive. "This thing could cost $20 million or more to run a year," he said. "That is a real budget buster."

In addition to a general drain on the city budget, the construction of a new jail would be a major burden specifically on health funds, and Health Department officials oppose the jail's construction on those grounds. Nancy

Public Defender Jeff Brown: 'There are other ways to intervene.'

Rubin, director of Forensic Services — which provides health care in the jails — told the Bay Guardian a new jail would cut heavily into her department's budget. "The 600 new beds that are being talked about could come close to doubling our budget for jail health care," she said.

The Health Department now spends more than $11 million providing health care in the city's jail system. "Because of a federal lawsuit, we have to provide a very high standard of care," Rubin said.

According to Rubin, the increase in health care for jails will come at the expense of other desperately needed city health programs. "The jail will take resources from other health-care programs or parts of other programs," she said. "I don't want the city to build a jail to provide health services. There are much better ways to provide health care."

One of the leading possibilities as a site for the new facility is on Harriet Street, across from the Hall of Justice. But construction on this site will spark significant opposition from housing activists. A 12-unit apartment building now occupies part of the site. Housing activist Calvin Welch told the Bay Guardian the tenants would have to be relocated before the construction there could go forward. "We view the loss of those units as a very significant housing issue," Welch told the Bay Guardian. "The loss of residential housing runs contrary to the residence element of the city's Master Plan."

Welch said the tenants of the building would have to be relocated in similar, rent-controlled apartments and the 12 units would have to be replaced somewhere in the city. He said the jail would not fit that bill. "I don't think any court would consider a jail replacement low-cost housing," he said.

AS DEBATE over building a new jail proceeds, Hennessey's sponsorship of the proposal remains one of the major political puzzles.

Several observers suggested that Hennessey had simply had his fill of fighting the rest of the criminal-justice system. "I think Mike is tired of fighting the Municipal Courts on this," Brown observed. "And he is getting intense pressure from his staff to improve their work conditions by reducing overcrowding."

Brown said the pressure, and not a change of heart, is the key to Hennessey's switch to advocacy for a new jail. "He is still the most progressive guy in the Sheriff's Department," he said.

Supervisor Richard Hongisto, a former San Francisco sheriff, said that Hennessey's past opposition to a new jail was part of a standoff with the rest of the criminal justice system. "In a lot of ways, it is playing a game of 'chicken' with the courts," he said. "You basically are sending a message to the courts to find solutions to the problem at their end."

Hennessey explained his switch simply. "I'm the one that has to take care of these people every day," he said. "I'm the one that has to see people sleeping on the floor."

Hennessey said he agreed with Walker's, Rubin's, Schiraldi's and Brown's assessments and ideas for the alternative programs. "They are all saying exactly what I believe, I agree with them entirely," he said. But he said that they were not facing the basic facts of the issue. "You can't just wish these problems away," he said. "The most liberal consultant we could find, the National Council on Crime and Delinquency, told us our average daily jail population in 1990 will be 2,000 people."

There are now 1783 beds in the county jail system.

Hennessey also said that alternative programs continue to be a major part of the San Francisco incarceration system. "We have more people than ever in alternative programs," he said. "We have a higher percentage of people in these types of programs than any other county in the state."

Hennessey denied that he was tired of fighting the battle to prevent new jail construction, and was instead trying to serve the inmate population as humanely as possible. "It is wrong for people to sleep on the floor, and alternative programs will not ease the problem in large enough numbers," he said.

Hennessey said the issue was a matter of constitutional adherence. "Every three months we have been told that our jails are not operating in a constitutional manner," he said. Hennessey said it was his job to make sure that inmates and employees of the jail system had a decent environment. "I don't arrest them, I don't prosecute them, I don't sentence them, I just have to take care of them," he said.

For years, San Francisco has been bucking a national trend. While federal, state and local agencies across the nation have poured huge sums of money into jail and prison construction and have promoted increased incarceration as a solution to the crime problem, San Francisco has looked at other alternatives.

Under Hongisto and Hennessey, San Francisco has promoted work furloughs, community service programs and other concepts as ways to keeping the inmate population down. But as Hongisto noted, at a certain point, the city's policy amounts to a game of "chicken" with the legal system.

If there are no new jail cells, judges will at some point have to stop issuing harsh and lengthy sentences — but in the meantime, hundreds of inmates will suffer. On the other hand, if the city expands its jail capacity, the current inmates will enjoy better and more humane conditions. But the new beds will soon fill up, too — and the overcrowding problem will arise once again.

There are no easy answers. But the jail construction proposal marks a spot where the city will have to take a stand. Either we continue to fight the good fight (at a heavy cost to the poor souls in the county jail), or we give in to reality and accept the consequences. ■

ANNOUNCING THE WINNERS

THE FIRST ANNUAL GUARDIAN OUTSTANDING LOCAL DISCOVERY AWARDS

THE NUMBERS alone are staggering: More than 130 theater companies, some 200 dance companies, hundreds of gallery spaces from storefronts to museums, more than 15 repertory film and video venues, 80 live music showcases and countless workshops, programs, courses and festivals. But even that doesn't begin to describe the richness of the Bay Area's arts and entertainment scene.

We've been following that scene for 23 years — from the Avalon Ballroom to the Paradise Lounge. Through our contests (fiction, poetry, cartooning, scriptwriting and photography), through our feature stories and through our reviews, we've covered hundreds of talented (and often struggling) artists, performers and companies.

And always, we've discovered a certain amount of frustration. Because the very attributes that make the Bay Area a wealth of activity and innovation also make it difficult for many local artists to find a venue, to attract a following...to get noticed. Recognition doesn't always go to the most talented — it goes to the lucky, or the promotionally minded, or those who are willing to avoid controversy.

The GOLDIES are part of our effort to change that. The Guardian Outstanding Local Discovery Awards are designed to recognize and celebrate some of the outstanding Bay Area artists and arts organizations that just aren't getting the credit they deserve.

The eleven winners of the first annual GOLDIE Awards are a diverse bunch, but they represent the three basic categories we've decided to showcase: younger artists who are bringing fresh ideas and energy into the cultural arena, veterans who have never received enough applause for their unique contributions and lifetime achievers who may have been honored for their individual works but have never been recognized adequately for the sum total of their careers.

To launch the GOLDIES, we ran an advertising campaign encouraging our readers to submit nominations. And nominate they did: We received more than 300 suggestions, from widely known performers (who do not need our recognition) to painters whose entire portfolio has never been out of the house.

Our editors and critics reviewed all the nominations and spent several months narrowing the group down to 11 finalists. The winners demonstrate just how remarkable a community this is.

Filmmakers find other filmmakers to work on their productions for nothing except the promise of similar support. A glass sculptor builds "sacred temples" to help alleviate the suffering and anguish she sees around her. A printmaker works with disabled adults, teaching them her craft. A couple founds a club to bring great jazz musicians and their music to the children of San Francisco.

To 11 who've made a difference, we're proud to present the First Annual GOLDIES.

Sydney Walker in ACT's A Christmas Carol.

You may recognize him as Scrooge. Or maybe you remember him as the Phantom Diner in restaurant reviews on Evening Magazine. Perhaps you wept when he told Ryan O'Neill that Ali MacGraw wasn't going to make it in Love Story. If the face of these roles doesn't ring a bell, there are other places where you probably have seen him. For Sydney Walker is an actor with 44 years of experience. He has appeared in more than 225 theater productions, numerous movies and a slew of CBS daytime dramas. If you don't recognize the face, there's the voice. Walker has narrated programs for KQED, KRON, PBS and NPR. He is a teacher and, in general, a great guy.

The Bay Guardian is honored to present Sydney Walker with the first GOLDIE Lifetime Achievement Award for his unceasing commitment and devotion to the theater.

Walker knew from his early years he was going to be on stage. The only hitch was that his first exposure to what he thought was theater (at age seven-and-a-half in Buenos Aires) turned out to be to opera instead. For the next three years he dreamed of being a great singer, only to be brought to a stage play. After being told that there was not going to be any singing, he decided that acting was the ticket. And for Walker, it was. "There is such a thing as a calling in life," he reasons.

SYDNEY WALKER

A pragmatic man with the air of a mystic, Walker has none of the affectations or attitudes one might associate with a stage veteran. In fact, he is always reminding his students and fellow actors that they are "servants of the public" — not the other way around.

He finds acting quite spiritual in the sense that every performance is a unique, and frequently cathartic, experience for each member of the audience and the cast. Walker combats the difficulty of maintaining a critical freshness for each performance by grounding himself with a new and genuine focus each time he goes on stage. He explains "I may have played my scene 100 times — I enter, say my line, then sit. But maybe I'll focus on the actress's mouth, really focus, so that I am actually experiencing something completely new while performing the same old scene." That focus and freshness are all-important to Walker, and a testimony to his long and varied career.

But he has no illusions about the power anyone, much less an actor, can have over his or her own life: "When human beings talk as if they are in control of their lives, they are seriously misinformed." Walker firmly believes we all have our share of burden to carry and confront. He finds it ennobling to see people who deal with great trials, and cites an acquaintance who, when dying from AIDS, found strength and peace in looking beyond death.

His constant quests to learn and teach keep Walker very young, so there is no generation gap to contend with in teaching the students at the American Conservatory Theater, where he has been an actor since 1974. For Walker, the plays in which he performs all over the Bay Area are another form of teaching. "Audiences come to plays to see how things happen. During the course of the play, they learn how." Walker is currently starring in the Marin Theater Company's production of The Broken Jug, through June 25th.

Sydney Walker is truly a great man of the stage. San Francisco is lucky to have him in its midst, and the Bay Guardian is honored to have him as our first lifetime achievement winner.

Joanna Haigood

Joanna Haigood has been described as one of the greatest treasures of Bay Area dance. An extraordinary dancer and choreographer, she is also the co-founder and director of ZACCHO, a dance/theater company that specializes in creating and adapting works for specific settings and in presenting choreography that integrates aerial suspension and flight.

Under Haigood, ZACCHO emphasizes collaborations between performers, other artists, like sculptors and composers, and multidisciplinary art, like architecture and design.

Haigood moved to the Bay Area in 1980 from New York. During the past decade she has danced with the Margaret Jenkins Dance Company, Lines Dance Company, Dominique Dupuy, Brava! Women in the Arts and Ed Mock and Dancers. Her works have been commissioned by such organizations as the Volcano Arts Center in Hawaii, the American Institute of Architects, the National Black Arts Festival in Georgia, the Festival d'Arles in France and Lines Dance Company.

The one word that continually appears in reviews of Haigood's work is "spellbinding." A 1987 New York Times review called her a "rare performer... the solos she presented captured not only her own remarkable qualities but a sense of the joy of moving and of her trust in the audience's intelligence and similar sense of pleasure."

Haigood's own driving intelligence — "I love to move forward" — melds architecture, magic and a natural curiosity that leads to everyday discoveries she incorporates into her work. This volatile mixture results in evocative and sensitive productions.

Joanna Haigood in an aerial performance.

Haigood says she is beginning to intuit, rather than control, the direction of her new works. Last year she collaborated with visual artist Mark Thompson on "The Keeping of Bees is Like the Directing of Sunlight" and realized that, because the situation was so different from any of her previous work (there were 750,000 bees), a new method could evolve. Haigood feels that she had unconsciously worked this way in the past, but her new project for the Festival d'Arles in France has cleared the way for a fully intuitive process.

The Festival is set upon an ancient cemetery, Elysium Fields, that has seen rape as well as death. Haigood received a permit to camp out in the cemetery, so that she may sleep and dream. Her dance will contain the elements of her journey to France: arrival, the sleep/dream essence of the cemetery itself and departure.

Haigood and ZACCHO also offer workshops and programs all over the country to share their original style and view. The Bay Guardian recognizes the greatness of such a dedicated and innovative artist, and is pleased to award her with a GOLDIE.

Steve Yerkey

With his slight West Virginia accent and his strong, crooning voice, singer/songwriter/guitarist Steve Yerkey might be mistaken for a country artist. "I don't think I'd be comfortable with that," he says. "I write some pretty filthy things." Though he does covers by the likes of George Jones and Porter Wagoner, his sets are also filled with R & B-and blues-influenced originals. It's the point where blues and country meet that he finds most exciting, and much of his material — the newer songs as well as those with his former band Nonfiction — tread just such ground.

Yerkey was born in West Virginia, grew up in Michigan and later lived in Kentucky, where he met Chris and Lance Campbell, the other members of Nonfiction. The three moved west to Sacramento in 1977, then to San Francisco in 1980, to begin Yerkey's first serious musical project.

"We were pretty unusual," he says, and club-owners and -goers were not enthusiastic about his material: "You begin to think that you're going crazy." He remembers one time when, just after the Nonfiction LP came out in 1986, a clubowner came up to him saying "Hey, you guys are really good," and they answered, "Well, we thought so!"

Nonfiction, which disbanded almost two years ago, "was very different from what I do now," he says, referring to his new band formed just late last year, which includes bassist Anwyl McDonald, drummer Donald Rowland and keyboardist/lead guitarist Will Bernard. "I used to write the music before the lyrics. Now I try to write the whole song at once." He likens that process to grabbing hold of an onion and pulling it straight out of the ground.

He writes most of the band's material himself, but the other members have begun to help out. He hopes that will continue as the band starts playing out more.

Yerkey takes his craft very seriously, and because he's a steady and fairly prolific writer, he gets frustrated when he has a hard time getting people to listen to his work. "When you record something, and it's pretty good, you can be done with it. But when you don't get to record you feel like the farmer with his watermelons rotting out in the field."

He admits being worried about losing his inspiration and songwriting energy because he recently quit drinking, but has been pleasantly surprised to find that that's not the case. "I've even done a drinking song — the first after two about not drinking."

Now 38, Yerkey got married for the first time last October: "I feel the full marvelous panorama of country music only unveils itself to married people."

Steve Yerkey is a musician with guts, talent and a sense of humor. The Bay Guardian is proud to name him a winner of the first annual GOLDie Award.

The GOLDies Task Force

The following people were invaluable in making the first annual GOLDie Awards possible: Misha Berson, Bruce B. Brugmann, Jack Carpenter, Jean Dibble, Peter Goggin, Rita Felciano, Zena Jones, Jeff Kaliss, John Litster, Iris Maher, George Miller, Jeff Nathanson, Nancy Newsome, Newa Ovitt, Derk Richardson, Dan Roam, John Schmitz, John Shiurba, Jane Sullivan and Kurt Wolff. Special thanks to HA.RU.KO for the wonderful photography.

Noh founder Claude Duval.

The Noh Oratorio Society is the brainchild of the late Claude Duval. He was a founder and director of the San Francisco Early Music Society from 1977-79 but found the music-only criteria too limiting for his love of words as well as music. Believing literature to be as much a lively art as music, Duval wanted to produce performances of literature and music that, in combination, would amplify each other.

Through his work with the Early Music Society, Duval connected with Michael Shain, now the treasurer/general administrator of Noh Oratorio. He and Shain began to stage readings in a Mission St. loft, the readings spilled into gallery performances and Noh Oratorio was born.

Shain is the genius behind several elaborate sets built for Noh Oratorio productions, including the puppet performance of Gertrude Stein's Saints and Singing. He studied at the Art Institute of Chicago before moving to the Bay Area, where he has since worked as an actor, painter, designer and director.

David Barnett and Yusuf Spires are the other two cornerstones of the society. Barnett, a former music student at Oakland University in Michigan, is the music director of Noh Oratorio.

He and Duval shared a mutual appreciation of early music and instruments. He appears frequently in Noh Oratorio productions.

Yusuf Spires is the literary director of Noh Oratorio. His studies include Arabic and Persian as well as music, European languages and literature. Spires works as an editor and translator and holds "very strong views."

The Noh Oratorio Society performs (as a rule) neither noh nor oratorios. Duval explained the riddle of the name in a 1987 interview in The Advocate, "[what is important is] the joke of Noh. The word no makes a negative association — which we make not negative by deliberately using the "Noh" spelling."

The society prides itself on producing pieces, both literary and musical, that are rarely seen elsewhere. Duval worked for years selling sheet music on the streets of Manhattan and, as a result, knew first-hand how much good material goes unproduced. The society has staged the works of Tristan Tzara, Djuna Barnes, Gertrude Stein, Edith Sitwell (with music by William Walton), modern British composers Harrison Birtwistle and Gordon Crosse (with a recitation of excerpts from the 15th century Scottish poet Robert Henryson's "Orpheus and Euridice"), Euripedes, Chaucer and e.e. cummings. Noh Oratorio also commissions works, including pieces from Birtwistle and local composer Richard Felciano.

The Noh Oratorio Society does many things that no one else does, or is likely to do. Their "house readings," informal gatherings where people leap in and out of roles, act as a kind of loosely structured screening for future projects. Their performances are not quite "performance art" because of the heavy emphasis on words. Duval stated in a 1986 Image interview that "We exist for all the reasons that poetry exists: It's compelling; there's something we have to tell people."

After Duval's death late last year, many wondered if the society would continue. Not Barnett, Shain and Spires — they asked, "How could it not go on?" The Bay Guardian salutes their spirit as well as their talent, and is pleased to award them the first annual GOLDie Award.

"I use light and glass to explore reflection and clarity, reality and illusion."

Dana Zed is a glass sculptor whose work expresses an innate desire to soothe and challenge. She does not create glass; instead she uses glass, other materials and instruments that transform the elements, "combining intuition and technology — with as direct and simple an attitude as that used centuries ago to place stones in circles."

Born in Pennsylvania and educated at Brown University and the Rhode Island School of Design (both in Providence, Rhode Island), Zed is an adopted Californian who does not miss the upper-middle class trappings of her upbringing. She currently lives in the Mission, after many years in the lower Haight, and enjoys the diversity and space that life in the Mission affords.

Zed honed her glass skills as a builder and assistant design engineer at Magic Glass, a glass furniture-builder in San Francisco. Although she worked primarily as a painter before joining Magic Glass in 1981, Zed always felt there was more inside her than the canvas could portray. Magic Glass offered that new venue.

The construction aspects of furniture-building tapped into an architectural desire within Zed. She began to build miniature monuments, "sacred little places," to help alleviate the anguish and terror of modern day existence. Her sculpture, embellished with such objects as stone, branches, feathers, snake skins and shells, is made more intricate by the use of mirrors on the inside, so that "in addition to their outside forms, the sculptures also have interior views... the effect is spacious, engaging, soothing and balanced."

Zed expands on her sculpture: "Fusing lends a softness to glass... esoteric temples of make-believe architecture develop in 'golden' proportion: sculpture as monument, sculpture as sanctuary, sculpture as safe place, as fun, peaceful, light place."

Zed has determined that "this is it," that sculpture will be the realization of her future artistic expression. And she is gaining support and notice. The Hatley-Martin Gallery, one of Zed's steadfast supporters, is having a special exhibition and reception on June 14th from 5:30-7:30 pm to showcase her work and to celebrate her GOLDie Award. And Zed will be having her own party on June 16th in her studio on Valencia Street. All GOLDie winners are invited, as is the public.

Dana Zed is a unique artist whose energies and talent are an exciting example of the thriving diversity of Bay Area visual arts. The Bay Guardian is pleased to present her with the first annual GOLDie Award.

NOH ORATORIO SOCIETY

ESTER HERNANDEZ

Ester Hernandez' Sun Mad.

Ester Hernandez's art evolves from fears and concerns. It's the product of her community and her life. "I can't just sit in my studio and dream it," says Hernandez. "I have to go out there and get my ass kicked around."

Born and raised in a farmworking family in the San Joaquin Valley, Hernandez learned early on the ethic of struggling to make advances — to make things right. "My parents have been involved with different farmworker union strikes from the 1930s on," she says, adding, "I never really let up on the cause because I have a personal interest in it." One of her best-known works relating directly to farmworker issues is Sun Mad, a 1981 serigraph that represents the dangers of pesticides to farmworkers.

Hernandez also says that her interest in art took shape in the valley. "I started giving visual forms to materials out in the grape fields," she recalls. "And my family and community also encouraged me." Her grandfather was a carpenter and made religious sculptures, her mother carried on the tradition of embroidery from her native Mexico and her father was an amateur photographer who documented the lives of the farmworkers.

But her art is not limited to a reflection of her own family and upbringing in the farmworking community. It addresses nuclear war, women's issues, birthing and mothering, death, politics and struggle in Latin America — "it's a very activist art," she says. "And for the most part, it's very direct — boiled down to its essence." Most of her work is 2-dimensional: paintings, murals, prints. Why? "Well," she says, laughing, "I have trouble making things stand up."

One thing she doesn't have trouble with is making a name for herself. Her big break, which she calls a lucky one, was to get into the California Arts Council and become an Artist in Residence in 1976. She was the first woman to have a one-person show at Galeria de la Raza and has had her work displayed across the United States and in England. "There are a lot of people out there who are interested in social change," she says of her popularity. "They're interested in supporting the arts and are comfortable living with these images."

Currently, Hernandez works with disabled adults in the Creativity Explored program, and is helping coordinate a show, Women in Racism, this fall.

The Bay Guardian is proud to give the first annual GOLDIE Award to a woman whose dedication to her community and her beliefs is matched by rare talent.

Daniel Geller and Dayna Goldfine

Although Dan Geller and Dayna Goldfine had a limited dance background — Geller did attend his high school prom — their film, Isadora Duncan: Movement From the Soul, is a tribute to the spirit of Duncan and the art form she helped to create.

Geller, a native New Yorker, studied film in graduate school at Stanford. He was deeply influenced by his father's work adapting short stories for public television: "I was exposed to quality stuff." Goldfine attended De Anza College in Cupertino, where she learned "by doing" in their "hands-on" film department. They are married and Isadora is their first joint effort.

The spark for Isadora came in a letter from a friend in Paris. Word that there was still a woman alive and dancing who had been trained by one of Duncan's daughters led to a correspondence between the dancer and the filmmakers. Her ideas tweaked the filmmakers' curiosity, and they began preliminary research.

What they found was a disappointing collection of depictions of "Isadora Duncan — Scarf Wearer." Challenged to dispel the lurid shadow her personal life had cast over her remarkable career, Geller and Goldfine set out to make a documentary that would "balance her life with her dance."

Further research proved exhilarating. They found Duncan scholars and fans throughout the country. Armed with reams of material, they then went to the Film Arts Foundation in San Francisco and found unceasing support. The Oakland Ballet agreed to learn some Duncan dances. The film was on its way. The cooperative nature of the Bay Area's independent film community proved to be crucial in making Isadora. Technicians worked for nothing, expecting to be able to call on Geller and Goldfine when they were putting together a crew for their own movie. They found support at every juncture, instead of the rampant jealousy and sabotage depicted in Hollywood exposes and "insider" reports.

The contrast between the Los Angeles and San Francisco film worlds crystallized when Geller and Goldfine took Isadora to Los Angeles to be screened. A friend told them she would really like to be at their screening, but it was the opening night of The Burbs and she couldn't miss it. As Geller succinctly states, "if Hollywood wanted to make the kind of movies that people up here [in San Francisco] make, we'd all be in Hollywood. Here people look at it [film] as art; down there they view it as a project."

The Bay Guardian created the GOLDIES to recognize hardworking artists whose main concern is not financial reward. Dan Geller and Dayna Goldfine are exemplary filmmakers. We are delighted to present them with the first annual GOLDIE Award.

JOSHUA RAOUL BRODY

Joshua Raoul Brody, when asked to describe himself in one word, replies "unable to follow instructions." His musical talents are wide and varied, although he's "not excellent at any one thing — my strong point is being good at many things." Those many things have made him one of the most versatile and valued members of the myriad theater and comedy groups around San Francisco.

Brody was born and raised in New York City, where he learned the basics of piano and theater. His subsequent education included studies at New York University, Berklee College of Music in Boston, the University of California at Santa Barbara, the San Francisco School of Dramatic Arts Musical Theater Program and the New Dramatists' Composer-Librettist Opera Work, sponsored in New York by the National Endowment for the Arts.

After moving to San Francisco in 1974, Brody hooked up with "Freaky" Ralph Eno and the Pointless Sisters.

Eno and the sisters needed Brody's musical talents and taught him the basics of theatrical and comedic performance in return. In 1977, Brody joined the Rick & Ruby show. Their success led to national tours (opening for Robin Williams) and network television appearances ("the bad season" of Mork & Mindy, Merv Griffin and Mike Douglas).

Brody (or "Righteous Raoul," as he was known) founded The STUPEDS (The Society To Undertake the Preservation of Endangered Dumb Songs) in 1980. Professional singers and players from around the Bay Area, fortified with an irreverent attitude, combine to make the STUPEDS a success wherever they perform — in fact, crowds are frequently left screaming for "less, less, less."

J. Raoul Brody's group, The STUPEDS.

Brody enjoys his widespread commitments. He has worked as music director with The Residents, Duck's Breath Mystery Theatre, Penn and Teller, Pee-Wee Herman and Commander Cody. His theater experiences include working with the Blake Street Hawk-eyes, Magic Theater, San Jose Repertory Theatre, Overton Theatre and A Traveling Jewish Theater. Clearly this is not a man without a thing to do.

He credits the unique environment in San Francisco for his lengthy resume. He cites non-commercialism ("there's not enough money here to matter") as well as the cross-pollination of talent. Some members of The STUPEDS, for instance, have their own projects in which they enlist other members of the STUPEDS and various other groups. This way, Brody explains, everyone feels free to pursue his or her own ideas, not just work on someone else's creation. As a result, each member can be completely devoted to a project controlled by a peer, because chances are these roles will reverse in the not-too-distant future.

Brody is a dedicated and quixotic composer/musician. The Bay Guardian admires his comedic instinct and broad commitments, and is pleased to award him the first annual GOLDIE Award.

Robert Dawson's Spillway, Lake Berryessa.

Sacramento-born Robert Dawson is a landscape photographer who uses his images to convey social and environmental concerns. In his ten-year career in the medium, he's focused his interest and his 4x5-view camera on a number of land and water issues that plague the West, presenting them through titles like "The Great Central Valley Project" and "The Water in the West Project."

In the '70s, while a student at the University of California at Santa Cruz, Dawson was mainly interested in psychology and student activism. His involvement with photography grew out of an interest in human creativity. Switching his studies to photography and his location to San Francisco State University, his first project, completed in 1979, was a series of portraits of patients in a mental hospital. "I became interested in using the images for social concerns," he explains.

These concerns turned toward the environment with his next project, a series of highly dramatic, panoramic shots of Mono Lake, the desert lake east of Yosemite whose streams are being drained off to feed the water demands of Los Angeles. This series brought Dawson his first big gallery show, at SF Camerawork, where he was recently elected to the board of directors.

Because of that project he met Stephen Johnson, and, in 1982, the two began The Great Central Valley Project. Both artists had grown up in the valley and, with this project, hoped to better understand its less spectacular landscapes and farming culture. The project juxtaposes contemporary photographs with historical images and text. Dawson's images bring up concerns like pesticide use and migrant farmworking, and although the issues are alarming, the works themselves are, ironically, incredibly beautiful.

Dawson's next major focus was the Water in the West Project, a huge undertaking exploring how water has been and is being used and developed throughout the Western U.S.

His newest projects include a study of Nevada's Pyramid Lake, another desert lake with water diversion problems, and the California Toxics Project, with photographer Loni Shavelson. Through the toxics project they have explored diverse problems from old, abandoned quicksilver mines in the Sierra Foothills to the supposedly "clean" industries in Silicon Valley.

A recipient of numerous grants and fellowships, Dawson's most recent award is a Visual Artists Fellowship from the National Endowment for the Arts. "a good pat on the back" he says, as well as a healthy sum of money. He currently teaches at San Francisco State, San Jose State University and City College of San Francisco. Gallery Min in Tokyo recently published a book of his work — his first such monograph. Bob Dawson has managed to fuse his artistic urges and social concerns to form a powerful and effective body of work. The Bay Guardian looks forward to his future projects, and is pleased to award him the first annual GOLDIE Award.

Cintra Wilson

"Surfin' down that road of destiny" is one explanation 21-year-old playwright Cintra Wilson offers for her precocious plays and their success. Wilson is known for her pithy dialogue: In Dognite, a character named Cylla imagines God "as an evil little girl with scissors, who gives her dollies scars and crewcuts."

Wilson herself is no evil little girl. She's much more like a vivacious blonde babe.

Her parents — a painter and a musician — hoped she would be an artist. As a result, and beginning early on, Wilson was toddled off to all sorts of music, drama, painting and dance lessons. Yet Wilson claims she thwarted their efforts: "If they'd gotten what they wanted, I'd be a classical pianist today." They did get a daughter with an uncanny ear (she hears dialogue in her head) and a performer's tireless instincts (she starred in, as well as wrote, her first two plays).

Juvey, Wilson's first effort, was written for a class at San Francisco State University. It caught the attention of producer/director Chris Brophy, who staged it to rave reviews at the Climate Gallery. The play details the experiences of three teenagers confined to Juvenile Hall, their relationships with their parents and counselors and their anger at a pointless and forgotten existence. In the stage production, Wilson portrayed a 15-year-old runaway busted for fleeing to Mexico with her boyfriend (a vaguely autobiographical role).

Dognite, Wilson's second production, is a campy melodrama she describes as "sleazeexploitation," a tricky tale of love, revenge, murder, corruption and idealism. The cast includes a tough bar owner, a revenge-crazed dame in a wheelchair, her drug-dealing attendant, and two fun couples (Bob, Carol, Ted and Alice). Although quite a departure from her first work, the sharp dialogue and piercing commentary that mark Juvey are still bright and shiny.

Wilson's role (as the thrown-over woman bent on revenge) allowed her to "screw up in front of an audience" and realize the immense responsibility a playwright shoulders in creating difficult characters.

She does not find such responsibility daunting. In fact, Wilson's current project is even more ambitious than her previous efforts.

Mondo Mambo, the kick-off event of Climate Theater's planned First Annual San Francisco National Puppet Festival, is an adult comedy-drama puppet extravaganza. A collaborative effort by Wilson (writer and star), Chrystene Ellis (puppets) and Joeh Bullock (director), the show combines live actors, special effects and mixed-media puppets. The production promises to continue Wilson's ferocious comedy-drama style.

With crackling dialogue and a distinctly original point of view, Cintra Wilson is making her mark on Bay Area Theater. Her main goal at this early juncture is to see how much success she can gain without compromising her standards. As Bay Guardian theater critic Misha Berson advises, "[Cintra] reminds us that now is a good time to start trusting people under 30 again." The Bay Guardian trusts that Cintra Wilson is a significant emerging talent and is pleased to present her with one of the first annual GOLDIE Awards.

Bright Moments Jazz Club

"When you're poor you think more" says Altaneze Taylor, referring to the almost-no-budget Bright Moments Music Lovers Club which she organized ten years ago with co-founder Dempsey Robinson. This kind of self-sufficient reasoning is surely a main factor in the success story of Bright Moments, the main purpose of which is to promote the beauty of jazz music among young children, who are usually (and, to some adults, surprisingly) very receptive.

Opening children up to jazz "began with my own" says Taylor, and now she is working with the children of San Francisco. One of the club's projects is a weekly program at a Bayview District elementary school. There, kids from kindergarten to second grade get to listen as well as participate during half-hour sessions with a number of local and nationally-known jazz artists. Past guests have included Billy Higgins, Steve Turre, George Coleman... the list goes on and on.

Taylor grew up in South Carolina and eventually moved to New York, where she was exposed to a lot of music. When she moved to San Francisco, "I had to seek out the music. I also wanted my children to hear it, and would take them when they were really small, whenever allowed."

Jazz composer Rahsaan Roland Kirk (a saxophonist who often played two or three instruments at the same time) was a friend of hers who had a dream of starting a school for little children, but never lived to realize it. The term Bright Moments was Kirk's, and Taylor and Robinson adopted it as a tribute to him.

Though it seems like the kind of organization that no one could dislike, Taylor says that people still raise eyebrows when she tells them about it. Even the school board has yet to be fully supportive. "I prefer to work in the schools because I'm coming to the children's home," and, without the parents there watching, the kids are less inhibited with their clapping, dancing and singing. "I try to focus on the positive things about the children of Bayview, because the good there doesn't get much press."

Taylor has developed a great relationship with the Bay Area jazz club Kimball's, whose owners welcome the young people of Bright Moments to the club when musicians come that Taylor wants the kids to see (with the parents' permission, of course). The tickets are paid for with donations, bake sales, t-shirt sales, penny-wrapping parties and other fundraising activities. Once she got the idea of a record raffle, and simply walked right into Tower Records, asked for the manager and found the store happy to help out.

In addition to weekly programs for children, the club also has its own Bright Moments Orchestra, made up of young musicians from the San Francisco schools. The club is also starting a mentor program, which hooks up serious young musicians with prominent older artists looking for someone to carry on their music. Every town needs a club like this — and people like Altaneze Taylor and Dempsey Robinson. The Bay Guardian is proud to reward these two great people, and the numerous other members of the Bright Moments Club, with the first annual GOLDIE Award.

RELIABLE THAI

Loyal customers find Chiang Mai's food and service consistently good

By Janet Hazen

I REMEMBER WHEN, ten years ago, my goal was to eat at every Thai restaurant in San Francisco. Now my goal is to eat at a Thai restaurant before two new ones open up on the same block. Thai food is definitely the most popular Asian cuisine in the Bay Area, and probably in most major U.S. cities.

Asian food maniacs have scouted out the best dishes at various places and remain loyal devotees of these establishments. It's fun to have a regular place you can always go to, but I like a change of pace, and I certainly enjoy trying new restaurants.

Chiang Mai, one of the many Thai restaurants on Geary, has built its reputation and popularity on consistent food and service and fair prices. This pleasant lunch- and dinner-house is usually quite full for dinner, but the service remains typically polite, efficient and cordial. Carved wooden screens, wall hangings and a softly lit airwell filled with greenery and a waterfall add charm to an otherwise simple and comfortable dining room. The atmosphere is relaxed and informal, and the close placement of tables and chairs makes for a potentially very friendly evening.

The menu is divided into typical Asian categories: appetizers and salads, soup, Thai curries, poultry, red meat, seafood and vegetables. Only two noodle dishes are listed on the menu, but since one of them is the popular Pad Thai ($5.25), that limited choice seems OK. A fabulous appetizer, main dish or accompaniment to any Thai dish, Pad Thai combines fried noodles with shrimp, onions, beancake and bean sprouts, all seasoned with galanga, fish sauce and ground peanuts.

Thai eggrolls ($4.25) at Chiang Mai are bigger than other Thai eggrolls I have had, but stuffed with silver noodles, ground pork and vegetables, these deep-fried appetizers are still tasty.

Karuda Wings ($5.25), a tricky preparation of silver noodles, chicken and mushrooms stuffed into chicken wings and deep-fried, were slightly dry, but good with their sweet-hot-sour dipping sauce. Beef and pork satays ($5.25) were also slightly dry from overcooking, but the flavors of their marinade and the peanut sauce were wonderful.

In fact, the only problem with some of the food at Chiang Mai comes from overcooking. Perhaps the feeling is that Americans prefer their food cooked more rather than less.

At any rate, a raw salad of green papaya, green beans, dried shrimp and peanuts called Som Tum ($4.95) was delicious and very refreshing with its slight crunch and tart flavors.

The many Thai curries are all tempting, which makes deciding on only one quite difficult. Kew Worn Gai ($5.25) is the only green curry, made spicy with lots of hot peppers and tempered with coconut milk and fresh basil. Tender chunks of chicken and bamboo shoots in the fragrant, basil-perfumed sauce are wonderful with the sweet Thai rice.

Equally pleasing was Ped Sawan ($6.50), baked duck breast served on a bed of quickly sauteed fresh spinach. The tender, succulent duck with greens is a sensitive and delightful Thai dish. Pla Muk Sod Sai ($6.95), whole calamari stuffed with ground pork, onions and spices served with bamboo shoots and a spicy sauce, were very complex in taste and quite good, but could have been cooked half as long, as the filling was dry and the calamari tough.

Least favored was Pla Rad Plig ($7.95), deep-fried pompano fish. This small, delicate whole fish calls for an equally delicate cooking method or, once again, half as long in the deep fryer. The sweet white meat, peppers and basil are a nice combination and very light. This would be much better, more moist and flavorful with less cooking.

Pad Pak Ruammit ($4.50), pan-fried mixed vegetables, is one of my favorite dishes at Chiang Mai. Crisp tender broccoli, cauliflower, cabbage and green beans cooked over very high heat are infused with a slightly smoky flavor that comes from using a very hot wok. A deep-flavored, almost beefy stock is served as a natural sauce for the assorted vegetables. Steamed Thai rice for 75 cents a person, served in the ever-present "silver" serving vessels, is delicious even by itself.

Thai beers and a moderate wine list are available, as well as Thai iced coffee or tea ($1.35) — both very refreshing and quite different from American teas and coffees. The usual friendly and courteous service found in most Asian restaurants is evident at Chiang Mai. The servers are as helpful and accommodating as they are proud of their food and restaurant. Whether you already eat Thai food on a regular basis or are just beginning to explore this cuisine, add this spot to your list. An agreeable place to dine, good food and prices and very easy parking — what more could you ask?

CHIANG MAI, 5020 Geary, SF, 387-1299. Lunch: Mon.-Fri., noon-3 pm. Dinner: Mon.-Fri., 5-10 pm; Sat., 5-10:30 pm; Sun., 4-9:30 pm. VISA, MasterCard, Diners, American Express. Reservations on weekends only. No-smoking section. No wheelchair access.

BOOKS

FOR COUPLES OR KIDS

Reviews of a new book on gay relationships and two new kid's books

RECORD-SETTING ANIMALS. By Melinda Bergman Burgener. Sierra Club Books, $7.95.

By Eileen Ecklund

ALTHOUGH IT'S meant for kids, anyone who loves critters will want this new publication from Sierra Club Books. It's not actually a book, but a set of animal playing cards in book form, complete with "amazing animal facts" on the back of each one.

The 48 "record-setting animals" detailed on the cards range from the bombardier beetle (the only insect that fires its own "artillery" in self-defense) to the bald eagle (which builds the largest nests — up to 9½ feet across and 20 feet deep).

No false advertising here — the facts on each card really are amazing. For instance, I had no idea that you should zigzag if you're being chased by a crocodile because, though they're fast, their legs are too stumpy to make sharp turns. Never know when information like that will come in handy.

The cards, printed on heavyweight paper and perforated for easy separation, are beautifully drawn by San Franciscan Melinda Bergman Burgener (who also wrote the text), and the colors are bright and cheery. There are 12 mammal cards, 12 birds, six reptiles and amphibians, six fish and 12 insect and insect relatives. In addition to the fun facts, each card lists the creature's length and weight and where it lives.

The book also introduces children to basic information about animal species and classes, and contains suggestions for 14 different games kids can play with the cards. Record-Setting Animals is the first book in the Sierra Club's planned "Wildcard" series, and me and the kids down here at the paper are already looking forward to the next one.

GAY RELATIONSHIPS: HOW TO FIND THEM, HOW TO IMPROVE THEM, HOW TO MAKE THEM LAST. By Tina Tessina, Jeremy P. Tarcher, Inc., 228 pages, $17.95 hardbound.

By Isadora Alman

FOR SAME-SEX couples who have always had to mentally revise heterosexually oriented relationship material ("just change the pronouns!"), finally here is a book addressed to you, and one worth waiting for. Tina Tessina has written a first-rate how-to manual on forming and maintaining intimate homosexual relationships.

Dr. Tessina is a southern California relationship counselor specializing in alternative lifestyles. (She has done the rounds of talk shows and lecture circuits explaining the how-tos of her open relationship with her bisexual husband.) Her previous two books, How To Be A Couple And Still Be Free (Newcastle Publishing, 1980, 192 pp., $7.95 in paperback) and Love Styles:

How To Celebrate Your Differences (Newcastle, 1987, 276 pp. $9.95 in paperback), are two of my favorite recommendations for learning the delicate art of negotiating with one's mate.

Underlying all the important information on good communications in Gay Relationships is the incredibly important dictum of honest communication with oneself. Whether the concern is redecorating one's living space in readiness for a promising date or making a clear-eyed evaluation of former relationships that didn't work, Dr. Tessina wisely points out that "A relationship is a partnership and you are one of the partners" — the only one you have the power to change.

It may dawn on some people that they keep on producing the same relationship play, using the same old script but with different actors in the role of lover. As an example of Dr. Tessina's sensitive and non-judgmental instructional style, she explains this non-productive relationship pattern as a function of "selective attention" (rather than self-defeating neurosis): Given a roomful of strangers, a person will notice and be attracted to those people and behaviors that seem familiar, in the same way that new owners of a Brand X car will start picking out Brand X cars from the blur of traffic. One sentence in Gay Relationships succinctly illuminated for me a longtime relationship puzzle I can't wait to pass along to my counseling clients. That is that feelings of "comfort and security arise from a couple's similarities, but excitement and growth arise from their differences...Both security and excitement are necessary for a truly fulfilling relationship."

Every single tidbit of illumination and practical advice in this thoroughly sensible relationship manual could be put to good use in any modern-day relationship. It is so superbly simple, so clearly and sensitively written, that everyone — whether inactive, in love or in trouble — can benefit from reading it. If intimate relationships interest you and you don't happen to be gay, read this book anyway. All you have to do is change the pronouns! ■

PIG TALES By Kiyoko. Kiyoko & Company (PO Box 277, Pescadero, CA 94060), 21 pages, $5.95 (plus tax and $1.25 handling if ordered by mail).

By Eileen Ecklund

IF YOUR CHILDREN love animals (and what kids don't?), they'll be crazy about his book, subtitled "The adventures of Arnold, the Chinese potbelly miniature pig." As told by Kiyoko, a Pescadero-based breeder of said potbelly pigs, Arnold's adventure is his arrival at a new home (Kiyoko's), and making friends with other animals that live there.

It's a simple story, meant for young-kids, with loads of charm and great illustrations by Sandy Clifford. In fact, the one quibble I have with the book is that there aren't more — and bigger — drawings. But the small paperback is packed with animal noises that make reading it aloud a pleasure for parents and kids alike, and Arnold is cute enough to capture everyone's heart. ■

ASK ISADORA

RIISING TO THE OCCASION

By Isadora Alman

weird diseases? Please answer in your column as I am too ashamed to discuss this with anyone.

Q: How do I talk lovingly and sensitively to my new love of eight months about his difficulty having erections? He takes great pains to please me orally and always does, but I feel badly when, more than half the time, he is unable to get or maintain an erection. He is very shy about talking about sex. Is there a delicate way I can bring it up (no pun intended) that will express my pain at his frustration and my desire to help without sounding patronizing?

A: You can be sure that he, too, is aware of his difficulty, and no doubt imagines all sorts of ways you might be feeling about it, none of them positive. Since he's shy, think of your broaching this subject as a kindness, which it is. Reassure him that you are always satisfied but you are worried that he might not be, therefore, could the two of you talk about what you could do to please him. Hearing from you, even more than once, that you do not think him less of a man because of his erratic responses is the most loving and sensitive thing you could do for him.

Q: I have dated more than 70 women and only two of them could ejaculate — the semen-like fluid comes from the urethra during orgasm. What kind of gland is responsible for this and why is it so rare?

A: If this is what you discover while "dating," your sexual encounters must really be something else! OK, sorry; let's get serious. That you found this response in less than 3 percent of the women you've been with is reflected in the fact that four out of five human sexuality texts I consulted for a good explanation don't even mention the phenomenon. The Grafenburg Spot is an area of glands and ducts located on the front wall of the vagina that develops from the same embryonic tissue as the male prostate, and is considered by some to be its female counterpart. When this area is stimulated directly it produces an orgasm accompanied by fluid expulsion from the urethra in some women. Why only in some women and not all? I guess for the same reason that only some people can wiggle their ears or pass a MENSA exam — Nature's perversity.

Q: I'm a woman in my mid-thirties who's been single for almost two years. I've always found masturbation a decent substitute when there's no lover in my life. However, recently I have discovered a frighteningly wonderful substitute. Since my chow was a puppy, I trained him to perform cunnilingus by enticing him by rubbing a bit of Alpo on my inner thigh. He took to this immediately and now performs the act with no Alpo. I've been engaging in this activity weekly for almost a year and I am concerned that I will have problems breaking this habit. Do you believe that this could be keeping me from having normal sexual relations with a person? And is there any possibility that I may contract any

A: First you need to know that sexually assaulting an animal (which is not defined) "for the purpose of arousing or gratifying the sexual desire of a person" is listed as a misdemeanor in the California penal code, punishable by up to a year in the county jail. For many people there is a very real issue of non-consent and power abuse in any human/animal sexual contacts. Second, the SPCA and animal-rights advocate readers need to know that by answering you (or any of the other letters in this column) I am not endorsing the behavior in question.

All that aside, your disease concern can be handled by having your vet check the animal for any parasite condition that might be transmissible. As for a dog (or a vibrator or any other non-human stimulant) being a substitute for a person-to-person connection — good as the critter might be at giving head — when the two of you can giggle together, when he brings you chicken soup if you're laid up with a cold, when he proffers flowers, a backrub or a goodnight kiss, then I'd worry.

Q: I am a 65-year-old man, very clean, neat, well-dressed and not fat, in good health except for impotence, which is under treatment. Through classified ads I have met someone into spanking games and oral sex. These things are great! Aside from being considerate, patient and understanding, what do you recommend so that I can be more appealing (or less unappealing) to young women?

A: If you were attracted to women near your own age or older you wouldn't even have to have all the virtues you list in order to be appealing to many many women. Things being what they are, you seem to be doing just fine.

FIND A NEED AND FILL IT DEPARTMENT: It had to happen, I guess. Remember the "does penis size really matter?" flap in this column last year? Someone wrote in to publicize an L.A.-based organization for owners of big ones and their female admirers called "The Hung Jury." In fact, the column on that subject led to my appearance on People Are Talking with the club founder and several others who were pro or con on the issue of size and its import. Well, now an enterprising local man hopes to form a similar organization for "well-endowed" women and their fanciers. . . and no, he does not mean with brains. I wouldn't have mentioned this at all except that I'm entranced with the name of his proposed group. If qualified and/or interested you can phone Earl at 588-4107 to find out about joining "Ta-Tas Till Tuesday."

Relationship counselor Isadora Alman, M.A., MFCC, conducts her private practice in San Francisco. She can be heard Sundays, 9-11 pm, on KRQR (97.3 FM) on her listener call-in radio show. Readers' questions for this regular column can be sent to her c/o Bay Guardian, 2700 19th St., SF 94110.

How To Get Ahead In Advertising

Or, how to get two heads in advertising. Richard E. Grant's the top account executive in London's biggest agency. For years he's extolled antidotes for piles, dandruff and bad breath, but now, inexplicably, with deadline only days away, boils build a creative block in his mind. He becomes so stressed-out he not only insults his weekend guests but utterly loses control, to the consternation of his caring, altogether lovely wife, Rachel Ward. Next he turns anti-TV, whereupon his subconscious wreaks revenge by manifesting itself in a boil on his neck. But this is no ordinary boil. It winks, it talks, it mocks, it grows, and turns Grant into a shrieking hysteric before inflicting far deadlier punishment. Grant's riveting as he rants, raves and savagely satirizes the evils of advertising, then switches sides, with writer/director Bruce Robinson providing a wickedly inventive vehicle that couldn't be a more biting, spot-on comment on TV advertising and greed (Vogue, SF)

Richard E. Grant.

For Queen and Country

Bemedalled black British Army paratrooper Denzel Washington retires to England and civilian life after nine years in Northern Ireland and the Falklands. But no hero's welcome awaits him and bigotry keeps him unemployed and forces him back to the police-harassed inner-city housing project where he once lived. His one friend is amputee Dorian Healy, who still manages to cheat on his wife, while former-friend-turned-drug-dealer Bruce Payne wants Washington to ply the same lucrative trade. He refuses, his interracial affair goes awry, the police persecute him incessantly, but the last straw's when a law enacted while he was away robs him of his British citizenship. All of which sounds like pretty meaty stuff, but Martin Stellman's writing and direction drain it of juices and make even a police/tenant war hum-drum fare. The film's pace never varies, and all we end up really knowing about its hero is that you can take Washington out of the country, but you can take the country out of Washington too. SANDMAN'S RAP

SOME OF the great elder statesmen of tapdancing, along with hot young tappers, will turn Davies Symphony Hall into a hoofers' palace this weekend. The Jazz Tap Summit, presented by Jazz in the City at 8 pm on Friday and Saturday, June 9th and 10th, brings together the Nicholas Brothers, Steve Condos, Eddie Brown, Sandman Sims and Honi Coles — all tap legends, still dancing up a storm in their 60s and 70s. Their younger co-stars are local dancer Camden Richman and teenagers Zane and Chance Taylor. (For tickets, call 864-5449.)

To get in the mood for this exciting tapfest we turned to Howard 'Sandman' Sims, a master of dancing on sand and a featured performer in the recent Gregory Hines film musical, Tap. Mr. Sims gave us some sage observations on his rejuvenated artform: "Tap was never lost, people just lost tap. It can't be lost because it's America's own culture. Now they've got another thing out called rap. Rap is taken from tap — they're just doing steps with their mouth. It all just gives you a chance to explore different rhythms and sounds."

"Artists want something new all the time, but you can't come up with nothing new because it's all been done before. They used to have conversations with their feet by dancing on top of leather drums. That was one of the first kinds of communication."

"I've been dancing ever since I was three years old. That's quite a long time because I'm 71 years old now. And I've just begun to dance. Dancing on sand is my major thing, and that's how I got my name, Sandman. As a kid I had nothing to dance on but sand because we lived near the beach, in Baja California. Now a lot of people have never seen a sand dance. It's the same kind of rhythm as tap but you have to move your feet differently. Tap dancing is patting, and sand dancing is like brushes on a drum."

"I played San Francisco years ago, at the Golden Gate Theatre with Lionel Hampton. But this is the first time I've come to your symphony hall. What will I do there? I never know what I'll do on stage, where I'll go, when I'll come off. There's a lot of dancers in the show, but we're all different. No tap dancer can imitate nobody else — each is an original. And I'm the original Sandman."

HISTORY IN MOTION

HUNA MCINTYRE, a Yup'ik Eskimo from Alaska who will perform on the last night (June 11th) of this year's San Francisco Ethnic Dance Festival, learned to dance from his grandmother. It wasn't easy. It wasn't even legal.

"When the missionaries came, they forbade dancing on a massive scale. They considered it evil and hedonistic," he says. "But of course, some people did not quit." Today, dancing has re-established its rightful place in the lives of the Yup'ik.

Despite the arrival of what some call "civilization," Chuna says large parts of Alaska remain isolated for much of the year, including the Yukon area around the southern part of the Bering Sea, where Chuna's brothers and sisters still live. "You can't just jump in a car and go to the store," he laughs. Berry picking, hunting and fishing are the mainstays of the subsistence economy, as they have been for the 3,000 years that the Yup'ik Eskimos have inhabited the region. Many of their dances — which are completely non-locomotive and focus on upper torso movements — reflect these activities.

Chuna is a man whose voice is soft and gentle, particularly when he talks about "home," where dancing is done simply to give "joy and excitement." He calls it "history in motion" because it records the events in a person's life so that the individual can tell his people not only what happened to him but how he felt about it.

"I have to dance," he says. "We are very physical beings. Every motion we make is a form of dancing — birds flying, people walking, picking berries — it's all a form of dance."

Boiling controversy: Rachel Ward and Richard E. Grant in How to Get Ahead in Advertising.

MOVIE MADNESS

Two new films deal with different types of lunacy

LA BOCA DEL LOBO (THE LION'S DEN). Directed by Francisco J. Lombardi. Thurs., June 8th and Wed., June 14th at the York, SF.

HOW TO GET AHEAD IN ADVERTISING. Directed by Bruce Robinson. At the Vogue, SF.

By Steve Warren

THOSE WHO criticized Mississippi Burning for concentrating on the FBI and white racists while giving short shrift to the black victims may feel the same way about La Boca del Lobo (The Lion's Den), which shows Peruvian peasants caught in a crossfire between Maoist Sendero Luminoso (Shining Path) terrorists and military counter-terrorists in the Ayacucho region.

The main characters are all soldiers; the poor Indians are only there to be abused. The actual terrorists are never seen, perhaps to explain (justify?) the paranoia that drives the military types, as guerrillas slip past their guards to vandalize and kill.

After titles too-briefly establish the situation and tell us the film is based on events that actually occurred between 1980 and 1983, Vito Luna (Tono Vega) takes over as our narrator. He joined the army for the career opportunities it offered, but becomes a voice of reason speaking out against the madness of the war.

His best friend and fellow soldier,

Quique Gallardo (Jose Tejada), is a more typical mindless military type who will do anything he's told and probably enjoy most of it. It's he who complains about the lack of women ("The only holes you get in a war are trenches") and eventually does something about it, while Luna endures celibacy in saintly fashion.

Their small unit is based in the fictional village of Chuspi, commanded by a wimpy lieutenant who gets killed early on. His replacement, Lt. Roca (Gustavo Bueno), is more aggressive. We learn that he screwed up his military career by getting drunk and playing Russian roulette. He won the game but lost his chance for promotion, which left him with a permanent chip on his shoulder.

Roca's strategy is to make the peasants, who just want to be left in peace, more afraid of the soldiers than they are of the terrorist guerrillas who presumably live in the surrounding hills.

A series of misdeeds on Gallardo's part creates an untenable situation, which Roca resolves by massacring 30 men, women and children, as Luna finds his manhood and his convictions questioned and tested.

Director Francisco J. Lombardi isn't quite in a league with Costa Gavras (at his best) or Alan Parker (at his most political), but neither does he have their resources. He's put together a lean, tense, well-acted film that perhaps most closely recalls Paths of Glory (although Lombardi's no Kubrick either).

Because of its theme of human rights violations, Amnesty International is sponsoring the U.S. release of The Lion's Den; opening night shows (7:15 and 9:30 pm) at the York on Thursday, June 8th, will be benefits for AI. Tickets are $5 in advance (441-3733) and $6 at the door. On Sunday, June 11th, there will be a free public forum at the York from 5 to 7 pm to discuss terror, violence and the politics of repression, in Peru and in general.

Perhaps Amnesty International should also be handling the marketing for How to Get Ahead in Advertising, which had its world premiere at this year's San Francisco International Film Festival. How could anyone who does advertising for a living sell such a vicious putdown of their profession? If they believe in the picture they should feel guilty about forcing it down consumers' throats, and if they don't believe it they won't want anyone who might believe it to see it.

That's the sort of dilemma affecting the film's hero, Dennis Bagley (Richard E. Grant, who played Withnail in Withnail and I), a burned-out copywriter who becomes visibly schizophrenic when he tries to get out of the business. He's faced with a deadline for a pimple-cream campaign and suddenly doesn't feel right about the knowledge that the cream won't relieve acne sufferers — that would ruin repeat business — it only offers the hope of relief.

Faced with the worst writer's block of his career, Bagley goes home to his wife (Rachel Ward) to try to get over it. His conscious mind rebels against the thought of ever writing another piece of copy, but his gung-ho subconscious fights him, taking the form of a boil on his neck, which eventually grows into a second head, carrying the concept of two-facedness to new heights.

The idea also calls for state-of-the-art special effects and provides a sensational acting showcase, which Grant, who should win an award for the way he plays either aspect of Bagley and twin awards for playing both, makes the most of. The Academy doesn't give Oscars for comedy, but you're not likely to see a better performance in any genre this year.

Despite the apparent success of Heathers, general audiences are not ready for the kind of dark satire How to Get Ahead in Advertising offers. People in the ad biz should flock to it as they do to the annual Clio Award winners, for their own protection and/or inspiration; and the effects could lure a young cult, maybe the Little Shop of Horrors crowd. It will take word of mouth to reach the others who would enjoy it.

Too intelligent for nonstop laughter, Bruce Robinson's script gets bogged down in its own metaphor before it's over and his direction can't save it in those moments; but the film scores so many points for courage, daring and originality that you shouldn't let a few blemishes keep you from seeing it.

As soon as he recovers, Dennis Bagley will be able to sell you a cream to put on those blemishes. ■

Scenes From The Class Struggle in Beverly Hills

Usually the outrageous and Paul Bartel are as inseparable as Sacher-Masoch and masochism, but here his comedy's more gray than black. One-time sitcom queen/Beverly Hills widow Jacqueline Bisset still mourns her late louse of a husband Paul Mazursky, despite "thinologist" Bartel's advice. Newly divorced neighbor/best friend Mary Woronow's removing every trace of her ex, Wallace Shawn, by having her house fumigated. She moves in with Bisset, along with sickly piano-playing son Barrett Oliver, playwright brother Ed Bagley Jr. and his met-five-days-ago black bride Annetta Walker. Meanwhile, houseman Roy Sharkey bets manservant Robert Beltran $5,000 that he can bed Bisset before Beltran can do ditto to Woronow, but then Shawn returns and a ghostly Mazursky materializes. By film's end nothing's the way it was and the struggle's been anything but classy, but although there's some memorable acting, the film lacks that let-us-prey humor that's Bartel at his quintessential kinky best. (Castro, SF)

Vampire's Kiss

Everyone knows that vampires are a pain in the neck, but they're nothing compared to Nicolas Cage's fly-by-night performance. And even if British director Robert Bierman's tyro try's supposed to be a comedy — Cage is so awful it's hard to tell — you'll laugh at it instead of with it. Cage is supposed to be a literary agent — he can't even read lines!! — and talks in a pseudo-accent that fits him even worse than his baggy suit. He tells miscast psychiatrist Elizabeth Ashley that his love life's being messed up by a mysterious bat in his apartment (not to mention the ones in his belfry). But then he meets vampire Jennifer Beals at a disco. Each night she makes a sucker out of him; he spends his days bullying secretary Maria Conchita Alonso about a missing contract and proves how really batly he is by wearing plastic vampire choppers. The dialogue's dastardly and the plot's constantly clotting — in short, this comedy's a tragedy! (Galaxy, SF)

LEARN SCREENWRITING FROM A HOLLYWOOD PROFESSIONAL.

Learn how to build a solid script that can work and sell in Hollywood. This class reveals the secrets that only a professional knows. As a writer and story editor for TV's 21 Jump Street and script doctor of over 1,000 film and television scripts, instructor John Truby will show you what makes a story strong and successful.

- In just 3 days this course will give you a step-by-step method you can use to write powerful scripts. Such as:
- 22 building blocks of every great script
 - The universal story structure
 - 5 major character changes
 - Writing more powerful dialogue
 - Genres: action, comedy, horror, detective
 - 4 necessities that make any plot work
 - Making your writing visual
 - Anatomy of a smash hit
 - Getting an agent and selling your script

Each class is illustrated by film clips. And when you're done, Truby will personally see that your script is read by an agent.

Over 2,000 Hollywood writers, producers and story executives have taken Truby's Story Structure Class. They range from new talent learning how to get their first break to the producer of Star Wars, the director of Best Seller, and the writer of Easy Money.

There's also a fool-proof guarantee. If you don't learn more in the first 2 1/2 hour session than any other writing class you've taken, Truby will refund your money and pay you $20 for your time.

For information, or to enroll, call (213) 454-7499. MasterCard and Visa accepted.

Dates: June 23, 24, and 25
Time: Friday 6-10pm, Saturday and Sunday, 9-6pm.

Andorra, with Vincent Lambert and Susan Rossman, is the first production of the Pacific Jewish Theatre.

THEATER

The new Pacific Jewish Theatre's artistic director takes a contemporary approach with his first production

ANDORRA. By Max Frisch, directed by Bill Reichblum at Pacific Jewish Theatre, Berk. Runs through June 25th.

By Misha Berson

THE SPICE BOX Cultural Center recently opened its doors for business, adding another attractive, conveniently located performance venue to the Bay Area cultural landscape. In south Berkeley just off Interstate 80, the Spice Box is the new home of the Pacific Jewish Theatre, formerly known as the Berkeley Jewish Theatre.

With a new home, a new name and a new leader at the helm, Pacific Jewish Theatre resembles its earlier self hardly at all. PJT's airy new brick playhouse opens out onto a pleasant complex of offices and commercial businesses. Inside, the Gene Angell-designed auditorium is still in progress — there are no carpets on the floor, no permanent seats and the sunken stage area is your basic concrete swimming pool. But the theater's raw, semi-industrial ambience blends well with the first show, Max Frisch's Andorra, directed by Bill Reichblum.

Andorra serves as a kind of calling card for Reichblum, PJT's 28-year-old artistic director. Reichblum is a newcomer to the Bay Area, and in his debut here he makes sure to assert his sensibility before the first word of dialogue is even spoken. He's draped the recessed playing arena in white sheets, and punctuated the whiteness with black, portable light stands.

The action begins when a gangly young actor enters, violin in hand, and attempts to play along with a sappy taped rendition of the tune Tradition, from the musical Fiddler on the Roof. His notes come out squawky and dissonant, so he shrugs, kisses the violin goodbye like you would a Torah and a jukebox takes over, blaring out an Israeli pop song with a Hebraic melody and a synthesized rock beat.

In one fell swoop Reichblum has thumbd his nose at the ethno-schmaltz approach to Jewish theater and allied himself with the rock-out, experimental wing of contemporary performance.

In tone and treatment, Andorra is a far cry from the Neil Simon comedies and Arthur Miller dramas the old Berkeley Jewish Theatre did way back when. Instead, Reichblum combines the caustic political tone of Bertolt Brecht (Max Frisch's mentor) with the visual theater aesthetics of Jerzy Grotowski and Robert Wilson (two of Reichblum's mentors).

Set in a tiny European nation (read: Switzerland) trying to stay out of war with the aggressive country next door (read: Nazi Germany), the play makes a cool, rather humorless indictment of group cruelty and hypocrisy. It zeroes in on a circle of Andorrans, a smug bunch who consider themselves peace-loving and morally superior to their neighbors. Actually, they go in for Jew-bashing too — they're just more casual about it.

Their chief target is Andre (Vincent Lambert), a sensitive young man raised by an Andorran Christian couple (Mikael Duden and Patricia Silver). Because of his alleged Jewish parentage, Andre becomes the whipping boy for everyone in town: the innkeeper (Priscilla Alden), the policeman (Noel Phipps), the doctor (Jessica Powell), even the mealy-mouthed priest (A. Donald Cross). He finds respite only in the arms of Barblin (Susan Rossman), the adoptive sister he loves.

It turns out that Andre has no Jewish blood, and his reaction to the news gives the plot its dark twist. Rather than shed his Jewish identity, Andre reaffirms it. He claims Andorra has made him a Jew: an exotic other, a pariah, a bearer of suspect traits. In the end, when a "Jew detector" singles Andre out for extermination, he marches off passively to Christ-like martyrdom. And not one fellow Andorran lifts a finger to save him.

The play poses some hard questions, not just about bigotry but also about Jewish identity and self-victimization. It also slyly punctures the myth of "neutrality" in cruel times. What it doesn't do is give us characters of much complexity. At least in this production, emotional and psychological resonance takes a back seat to visual inventiveness.

The visual touches do keep Andorra lively, and show off Reichblum's flair for creative staging in a nearly bare space. Without ever resorting to gimmickry or pretention, Reichblum and his design team (David Hoffman on sets, Tim Wessling on lights and costumer Jill Whitcroft) conjure simple but resonant effects with the draped sheets, moveable spotlights and the sunken pit with its perimeter.

When the townspeople train the spotlights on their own faces to deny responsibility for Andre's death, they remind you of Nazi collaborators in a Marcel Ophuls film, giving unblinking testimony to the camera. A large sheet, hoisted and lowered by pulleys, does imaginative dramatic duty, enshrouding the actors in some scenes and nestling them in others. And in the eerie final "detector" sequence, a row of splattered old shoes lined up on the floor instantly brings to mind the death camps. It's a stark image that needs no explanation.

If the emotions expressed in this production were as strong as its visual images, it might have packed a double whallop. That's not the actors' fault — they have thin, mono-dimensional roles to play. Some do manage to squeeze a lot from the little they're given — particularly Priscilla Alden as the vinegary innkeeper, and Andrea Snow as a mysterious visitor.

But in the meatiest role of Andre, Vincent Lambert doesn't do enough. His performance exemplifies the show's strengths and weakness. A very handsome young actor, his lean, vivid face and mop of dark curly hair give him a haunting visual resemblance to Renaissance portraits of Christ. But on the emotive level Lambert seems tentative much of the time, unsure about how to segue from feeling to feeling. Too often he substitutes a glare or a quizzical look for a flash of rage or fear.

Next year PJT plans to present its first full season in several years, and its first ever at the Spice Box. In recent press interviews Bill Reichblum has outlined his extremely "catholic" concept of what a Jewish theater can be, noting that he's open to doing Strindberg, Shakespeare, a new play about the Chinese cultural revolution — any worthy dramatic material that in some literal or symbolic way "reflects the Jewish experience." With Andorra, he's shown his excellent eye, but not yet his heart.

SUBURBAN CRUSADER

Celtic Elvis's Jim Ocean combats smugness

By Derk Richardson

I WANT to put a challenge out there to musicians who complain about the music scene," says self-described cultural activist Jim Ocean. "Try to change things. If you have any kind of integrative skills or business skills, take the reins in your hands and do something with them. Don't just bellyache about it, try to make things different. This damned 'thousand points of light' is just not gonna do it. We've got to do it on our own at the grassroots level."

Ocean puts his activism where his mouth is, and his assault on complacency is two-pronged. For the past ten years he has masterminded the Musician's Coffeehouse concert series in Walnut Creek. And for the past two years he has channeled his social dissatisfaction and satirical wit into songs for his vocal harmony quartet, Celtic Elvis.

This Saturday night, June 10th, Celtic Elvis performs at the Noe Valley Ministry in San Francisco. (And in an inter-county cultural exchange, flutist Larry Kasson, who organizes the Noe Valley Ministry Music Series, plays with his Allstars at Musician's Coffeehouse on Friday night, June 9th.)

Operating out of the Mt. Diablo Unitarian Universalist Church, the Musician's Coffeehouse provides an intimate performance space for local and touring performers while adding a splash of cultural diversity to the suburban landscape. Ocean started the concert series in 1979 as an open mike affair. "The first one was just terrible," he laughed recently over breakfast at an Emeryville restaurant near his day job as a Celestial Seasonings tea distributor. "Half the audience left after the intermission."

"Much to my amazement, the Coffeehouse started becoming more and more popular and more and more professional." Performers making the eastward commute have included guitarist Michael Hedges, David Grisman, Jesse Winchester, Uncle Bonsai and the Turtle Island String Quartet.

Ocean had been a longtime folk performer, mostly in Sonoma County, when he decided to open up the Contra Costa frontier. The rising calibre of performances at the Coffeehouse prompted him to form his first band, Celtic Elvis, with bassist Rich Wescott, who had been documenting the concert series on audio- and videotape; lead singer Randy Anger, who had organized the Coffeehouse food concession with his girlfriend; and audience-member, shower-singer and eventual wife, Marcy Straw.

Riding on rhythm guitars and tight-knit harmonies, Celtic Elvis sings original fear-and-loathing songs about modern phenomena and foibles with such titles as "The Road to Gridlock," "I'm a Robot for Jesus," "Style Over Substance," "Baby Valium," "Love as Real Estate/You're My Fixer-Upper" and "High On Stress."

In either role, as concert promoter or performer, Ocean is something of a crusader against smug self-satisfaction. "I think there is a real arrogance in the urban mentality," he says, "that nothing good can be out there, that everything in the whole place is terrible, including all the people. And it's hypocritical because a lot of people who are urban were raised in the suburbs."

Ocean doesn't glorify suburban life, which he sometimes refers to as "a cultural wasteland." His song "Gas Food Lodging/My Home Town" portrays "God-fearing children/ Raising children as a hobby/ In the evening/ They have ice cream/ Around the glowing color TV." But he reminds jaded would-be sophisticates that "this town goes forever.... The umbilical cord will not sever."

Ocean, who lives in Martinez, came to the suburbs as Jim Jochem, born a military brat in Germany, moving subsequently to North Dakota and Oklahoma. "I almost missed everything," he explains, "and then my father had this idea of moving to California, which was my great salvation." Someone put a guitar into his hands when he was 13 and he tuned it wrong until he was 18. When he met a country-and-western singer who wrote his own songs, Ocean thought it was "the closest thing to metaphysics I'd ever seen."

As a 15-year-old he ran away from home, lived out of his Rambler Classic and signed onto a carnival in Ukiah. "It sounds like I made it up, I know," he admits. "It sounds very romantic. But those carnivals, they'll take anybody when they're breaking down those damned rides." After returning home and graduating from high school, Ocean took up the troubadour's life, immersing himself in the Sonoma County folk scene of the early '70s, then following a love interest to the East Coast, where he lived across the street from a little homespun concert series that became an inspiration. He returned to Contra Costa County when he was 24 to adopt his younger brother out of a painful family situation. When he had trouble finding work he decided, "That's it, I'm cutting something out of whole cloth." That's when the Musician's Coffeehouse was born.

"I consider myself a cultural activist," he explains. "That's my main thing, whether I'm writing a song or producing a concert series or voting for somebody. I'm very passionate about changing the culture. I think the culture of America is the single greatest thing we have going for us and the single greatest thing we have going against us, from the mix of Latin and black culture to the culture of violence in the National Rifle Association."

He is heartened by the success of other grassroots music projects, like the Kerrville Folk Festival in Texas, whose founder, Rod Kennedy, is planning a similar event in the Yountville Grange Hall in Napa next October. Ocean talks about "changing the culture of the business." He and Marcy Straw set up Creative Musical Alternatives through which they have helped organize a jazz series in Danville, a Musician's Coffeehouse-like project in a converted Kentucky Fried Chicken restaurant in Fresno and a forthcoming summer-long festival in Todos Santos Park in downtown Concord.

Celtic Elvis, however, is becoming Ocean's primary vehicle and it has taken him down a road quite different from his early musical path. "I used to be a very serious hit-over-the-head-look-at-the-wound singer-song-writer," he says, "and there were always about 40 people who would come out and expose their heads, saying 'Hit me again, Jim!'" As evidence of his solemnity, Ocean mentions "My Eyes Still Look For You," the song he wrote about the search for missing children inspired by the disappearance of Kevin Collins. He won a songwriting prize for his efforts but Ocean has since rewritten the tune into something called "Sex-Crazed Intellectuals," an ode to the mind-body dichotomy in the post-sexual revolution age.

"I really think the topical song of the '80s and '90s has to be a little bit different than it used to be," Ocean explains. "I have to ask how do I become entertaining and still deliver something of substance? We're trying to push humor right up to the bone."

Record companies haven't exactly been knocking down the band's door — one executive told Ocean they were "too intellectual" — but this suburban cultural activist is undaunted. "I'm very tenacious," he says. Celtic Elvis is currently recording its first studio album, The Rise and Fall of Practically Everything, on its own Heavy Mental label. (A live cassette, High on Stress!!, was released last year.)

"The humor market is given over to infantile bullshit like Weird Al Yankovic," he argues. "It's appealing to teenagers but I think adults desperately need humor — it's a way out, but never totally out. I don't want to be viewed as a novelty act, of course." Nonetheless, Celtic Elvis will be performing its version of "Heartbreak Hotel" at the upcoming Vancouver Folk Festival, accompanied by 20 bagpipers.

In the meantime, Bay Area audiences, urban or sub-, can accept Ocean's stressful invitation to "Come see my bloodshot eyes/ Hear the wicked way I cough/ No I don't sleep at night/ Because my mind just won't turn off," and go get nudged out of their "Short World Memory" or their "Ritual Worrying" with the assurance that "The Worst is Yet to Come."

Celtic Elvis performs Sat/10, 8:15 pm, Noe Valley Ministry, 1021 Sanchez at 23rd St., SF, 647-2272, and Sat/24, 8 pm, Musician's Coffeehouse, Mt. Diablo Unitarian Universalist Church, 55 Eckley Lane, Walnut Creek, 229-2710.

8 DAYS A WEEK

9/Friday

The Art of Film Narration During the silent film era in Japan, films were accompanied not only by music and written titles, but also by a katusben, or narrator, who stood beside the screen reading the intertitles and explaining and enacting the film plot. During the heyday of the silent era, the narrator — whose traditions had roots in Japanese Noh and Kabuki theater — received higher billing on the marquee than the film title or screen stars. Tonight, Ms. Midori Sawato, Japan's leading narrator, performs D.W. Griffith's Broken Blossoms at 7:30 pm. At 9:30 pm, Ms. Sawato narrates the short Your Sin/Sakube's Story, followed by The Outlaw, which features recorded narration by Ms. Sawato's mentor, the late storytelling master Shunsi Matsuda. Pacific Film Archive, 2625 Durant, Berk. $5-$7. 642-1412. (On Sat/10 at 7 pm, Ms. Sawato performs The Water Magician, the earliest surviving film (1933) by Kenji Mizoguchi, followed by Kid Commotion (narrated by Sawato) and Jirokichi the Burglar (recorded narration by Matsuda) at 9:05. Sun/11 at 7:30 pm is a documentary on samurai film star Tsumasaburo Bando directed by Shunsi Matsuda, Bantsuma: the Life of Tsumasaburo Bando.)

Living Word Memorial The National Poetry Association honors poets who have died of AIDS, and benefits an upcoming edition of their work entitled Anthology of the Living Word. Speaking and reading tonight are Cleve Jones, Neeli Cherkovski, Harold Norse, Steve Abbot and others. Among the poets and writers honored at this memorial reading are Ted Aldrich, Sutter Marin, Richard Irwin, Sam D'Allesandro, John Selby and others. An open reading follows for eulogies. 7:30 pm, SF Art Institute, 800 Chestnut, SF. $5 minimum donation. 776-6602.

SF Ethnic Dance Festival This annual festival celebrates the high diversity among the Bay Area's many dance groups. There are

32 groups in all, spread out through five evenings of performance. Check the dance listings for a roster of the performers each evening. 8 pm, Palace of Fine Arts, Lyon at Bay, SF. $10-$25 Fri.-Sat.; $8-$12 Sun. 552-3656. (Also Sat/10 at 11 pm, and Sun/11 at 7:30 pm.)

★ 'Behind the Silicon Curtain' In his recent book Behind the Silicon Curtain: The Seduction of Work in a Lonely Era, journalist Dennis Hayes pulls apart the veil of cleanliness in Silicon Valley industries to reveal a toxic-ridden, high pressure world that, while promising high-tech miracles to the world, reaps havoc on its workers — and on the surrounding environment. 8 pm, Modern Times Bookstore, 968 Valencia, SF. Free. 282-9246.

Art Criticism Series The last of three lectures on Art and Art Criticism presented by Small Press Distribution is entitled "Criticism: As Rhetoric, As Cultural Identity, As Social Practice." Tonight's panelists are Bill Berkson, Michael Anderson and Christine Tamlyn. The series is curated by Kathleen Frumkin. 8 pm, Small Press Distribution, 1814 San Pablo, Berk. $4. 549-3336.

★ Otto and Hansel Hagel In conjunction with the Eye Gallery's exhibit of photographs by Otto and Hansel Mieth Hagel, photographer Peter Stackpole gives a slide talk about their lives and work. The two were born in Germany, moved to the U.S. in the late 1920s and worked for Life magazine from the '30s to the '50s, with subjects varying from secret labor organization meetings to the FBI's roundup of Japanese-Americans in San Francisco. They've got a large body of work to their credit, and were working at a time when the medium of photography was gathering strength, but have never really made it into renditions of photographic history. Stackpole is a prominent Bay Area photographer, and a contemporary of the Hagels. 7:30 pm, Eye Gallery, 1151 Mission (between Seventh and Eighth St.), SF. Free. 431-6911.

Buck Naked & the Bare Bottom Boys Some say this band is totally crass and really great, others wrinkle their noses and say it's a crock of shit. But a headlining gig at the I Beam on a Friday night has got to mean something. Teen Beat dream date rejects Thee Hellhounds also perform, along with The Stupeds (The Society to Undertake the Preservation of Dumb Songs). 10 pm, I Beam, 1748 Haight, SF. $5 advance. 668-6023.

Anthony Braxton & the Ed Kelly Trio Reddit/composer Braxton meets Oakland pianist Ed Kelly for two evenings of jazz standards played "in the tradition." Kelly's trio includes bassist Herbie Lewis and drummer Donald Bailey. 11 and 10:30 pm, Concepts Cultural Gallery, 480 Third St., Oakl. $12. 763-0682. (Also Sat/10)

★ 'Seven Deadly Sisters' The Pleiades Players present this comic mystery/thriller, where mysterious circumstances send seven twisted sisters on a metaphysical journey into their deepest fears. The Pleiades Players are also known as the Advanced Ensemble for Women at the Dell-Arte School of Physical Theatre in Blue Lake, California, and have recently completed six months of study on the role of women in populist theater. Plays Fri/9-Sun/11 at 11 pm, with a special midnight show Sat/10. Studio Eremos, 401 Alabama, #127, SF. $5. 552-3541. (Also Wed/14-Thurs/15 at 8 pm, La Pena, 3105 Shattuck, Berk. $5. 849-2568.)

Dinofest '89 In this new exhibit, the California Academy of Sciences is bringing to life eleven automated dinosaurs — made by Kokoro Company in Japan — which will move, hiss and roar every day until the exhibition closes on Sept. 10th. Dinofest '89 is also a preview of the new exhibits being created for the Academy's new hall "Life Through Time: The Evidence for Evolution," due to open next year. Three of the Dinofest creatures will be a permanent part of this new exhibit. Today's and tomorrow's opening family festivities include "make and take" dinosaur stencils and footprints, Science in Action speakers and a costumed dinosaur. Museum hours are daily, 10 am-5 pm. California Academy of Sciences, near Eighth Ave. and Kennedy, Golden Gate Park, SF. adult admission $2-$4; children $1 or free. 750-7142.

Electric on the Eel '89 Bill Graham and the Hogfarm present this third annual "Electric on the Eel" concert, said to be "Northern California's most beautiful concert site." The Jerry Garcia Band and Dr. John headline the show, which also has food, crafts and swimming in the Eel River. No taping allowed (yeah, right). 1 pm, French's Camp, nine miles south of Garberville on Hwy. 101. $18-$20. 762-BASS.

★ East Bay Open Studios The sixth annual East Bay Open Studios — a less publicized but equally massive opportunity to see new art as the San Francisco open studios event which happens in Oct. — is held this year on two weekends, due to the nearly 480 artists participating, whose studios are in Alameda, Berkeley, Oakland, Albany, Emeryville and Richmond. Today and tomorrow, 11 am-6 pm, studios North of Broadway and MacArthur Streets are open; June 17th-18th, studios south of those two streets are open. A

ECLECTIC COLLECTIONS

The Bay Area's smaller museums exhibit everything from tattoo art to Mexican masks

By Adam Mayes
and Jeremy Mindich

IF YOU'RE LOOKING for an interesting place to take visitors or just somewhere to spend an afternoon on your days off this summer, there's a museum in the Bay Area to suit every taste. Everyone knows about the big ones — the Museum of Modern Art, the De Young, the Oakland Museum. But what most people don't know is that there are myriad smaller museums in the Bay Area, from those that showcase the art and cultural artifacts of various ethnic groups to those devoted to a particular topic or craft.

Below is a roundup of some lesser-known museums that we think are worthy of one visit or many. Each makes a unique contribution to a region as diverse as the Bay Area. There are many more out there to be found — perhaps you'll stumble on a few more while touring the city this summer.

The old U.S. Subtreasury Building on Commercial Street is home to the Pacific Heritage Museum, a small but fascinating art museum. Built in 1875, the building withstood the 1906 earthquake only to be gutted by the fire that followed. Rebuilt and restored, it now houses exhibits highlighting aspects of Pacific Rim culture on the museum's three small but well-appointed exhibition floors.

Through September the museum hosts an exhibit of Chinese art treasures from the National Palace Museum in Taipei, Taiwan. The National Palace Museum is a direct heir to the Imperial Collection accumulated by generations of palace curators in Beijing. The curators divided and moved the collection repeatedly to evade the invading Japanese and later the advancing Communists, and part of it finally arrived in Taipei with the Nationalists.

The exhibits on the first and second floors highlight the development of Chinese painting and porcelain. Each features impressive reproductions of representative pieces from the T'ang through the Ching dynasties, which is to say almost two millennia of work. The basement level features a small display of Chou and Shang dynasty (3,000 years old, give or take a century) bronze "ritual vessels," all green and knobby, along with selections from the museum's modern collection, begun in 1986.

The modern pieces run the gamut from sculpture and eggshell carving to pottery and lacquerware. Outstanding pieces included Chan Liu-miao's life-like diorama of foot-high figures, crafted of leather bunched, twisted and carved to show draping robes and flowing hair, and Kuan Ch'un-mai's imaginative eggshell carvings. Admission is free. Museum hours are Mon.-Fri., 10 am-4 pm. 608 Commercial, SF. For more information, call 362-4100 (the Bank of Canton, the owner of the facility) and ask for the museum.

A few doors before the Greyhound bus terminal on Seventh Street, up a steep flight of stairs marked "no dogs or personal checks," the Tattoo Art Museum displays its unique collection of artifacts relating to this very personal decorative art. The four-room museum adjoins the tattoo parlor run by its curator, Lyle Tuttle, a master tattoo artist and a walking tattoo exhibit himself.

Tuttle opened the exhibit 28 years ago and filled it with art, instruments, photos and news clippings collected during his 40-year tattooing career. Although clearly not a professional museum — no track lighting or wall-to-wall carpeting here — the exhibits are informally but carefully arranged and annotated to show the geographic breadth and historic depth of tattooing practices.

Through the doorway under Tuttle's certificates the exhibit first displays accounts of traditional tattooing practices of the Pacific, from Borneo to Tahiti. More photos, along with contemporary letters and news accounts, cover some of the great historical tattoo artists, like London's "Professor"

Vintage painted signs decorate the museum's walls, advertising the glories of the tattoo, which, one set of instructions advises, will last "until your corpse rots in the grave." If you feel inspired, tattoo work here costs $100 an hour. Admission is free. Museum hours are daily, noon to midnight. 30 Seventh St., SF. 775-4991.

The Fort Mason Center, home to a wide array of cultural facilities, boasts several small, culturally oriented museums. The African American Historical and Cultural Society maintains a small collection of African artifacts as well as historical exhibits on local African-American figures of distinction. The African collection includes a variety of wooden artifacts, including masks, statues, ritual staffs, implements and modern carvings.

Several wooden masks from the Bambara people are particularly striking, displayed prominently along with a tall sculpture, a "family tree" of stylized heads rising from one another. Three lovely Macandi carvings similarly consist of polished columns of human forms, their faces gazing out, surmounted by a single larger face.

Charles Burchett. Burchett's work in the early decades of this century varied from improving ladies' complexions to helping British Army Major James Ridler become a self-made freak. After Burchett tattooed him from crown to toe with broad, swirling stripes, Ridler became "Om the Great," his "barbaric" appearance in one news photo enhanced by huge ivory nose and ear decorations.

The permanent exhibit includes a display devoted to a modern American artist, Sargent Claude Johnson, who lived and worked in San Francisco through the Depression until his death in 1967. Mary Ellen "Mammy" Pleasant also has a display devoted to her. Sometimes identified as a notorious "voodoo queen" and San Francisco madam of the last century, the exhibit here throws a very different light on her.

Born into slavery in Georgia, Pleasant was eventually freed and married an abolitionist landowner. After his death, she remained a secret benefactor of the militant abolitionist John Brown, and fled west to San Francisco after federal troops captured Brown at Harper's Ferry. In San Francisco, she helped bring about an 1863 law permitting blacks and other minorities to testify against whites in court, and in 1864 she successfully sued a San Francisco streetcar company to allow blacks to ride. She died in Oakland in 1904.

The Society also has changing exhibits. Currently, the Black Arts Festival exhibit features work in a wide variety of media, running through June 30th. Admission is free. Museum hours are Tues.-Sat., noon-5 pm. Building C, room 165, Fort Mason Center, SF. 441-0640.

Right across the hall is the Museo Italo-Americano. Through June 11th, the museum displays "Chi erano?/Who Were They? The Photographs of Gino Sbrana." The exhibit features clear, crisp, black-and-white portraits of East Bay Italians, taken between 1910 and 1927 by Sbrana, a local traveling photographer (and opera singer). The images, some hand-tinted, provide a remarkable record of the East Bay's Italian community in the early decades of the century.

Although the poses are formal — inevitable because of the long exposure time — they seem natural, set in everyday surroundings and unmarred by forced "say cheese" smiles. Some of the subjects are well-dressed: Women wear lacy white dresses and men sport suspenders, cravats and slicked-back hair that would be fashionable today. Others are dressed in work clothes and pose in their warehouses or in front of their delivery trucks.

The "Carretto Siciliano" in the library in back also merits a quick look. The traditional two-wheeled cart is covered by brightly painted images illustrating a heroic tale of knights and Saracens.

The photography exhibit will be followed June 16th by 'MOSTRA '89: Sei artisti,' which is an exhibition of six local Italian-American artists. Admission is free. Museum hours are Wed.-Sun., noon-5 pm. Building C, room 100, Fort Mason Center, SF. 673-2200.

The Bambara masks shown at the African-American Historical and Cultural Society should whet the appetite for another exhibit at the nearby Mexican Museum. Entitled "Mascaras: Reflections of a Culture," and annotated in both Spanish and English, the exhibit showcases the Mexican mask-making tradition.

The two traditions actually cross-pollinated when the Spanish conquerors brought African slaves to Mexico — 250,000 of them in the course of Spanish rule. Their presence is most evident in the "negrito" masks that represent them, but their influence can also be inferred more widely.

Masks were an essential part of Mexican culture long before the arrival of the Spanish and the Africans, however; the magnificent stone figures and the faces of polished obsidian and jade left behind by the Olmecs and Aztecs testify to that.

The exhibit features seven distinct sets of masks. The earliest adorn the stone figures and manuscript pages that pre-date Spanish influence. Others are still used in various traditional festivals, like the conquest dance, which reenacts Hernando Cortes' conquest of Mexico with the help of a diverse mix of historical and mythical characters: Pontius Pilate and other Romans, Moors, crusaders and Malinche, Cortes' legendary Indian mistress.

There are animal masks representing all types of creatures, including a dozen tiger masks ranging from ferocious to goofy, and an armadillo mask made of a whole armadillo shell with a long "nose" whimsically stuck on the back. The bearded, rosy-cheeked faces of the Spanish cavort among the carnival masks, and a wall covered with variations on the diablo includes an eerie pre-Hispanic variant with a lizard crawling across his face.

The museum also features an exhibition of "Obras en Papel," recent works on paper by a number of West Coast Mexican-American artists. Both exhibits close August 20th. Admission is $2, $1/seniors and students, children under 10 free. Museum hours are Wed.-Sun., noon-5 pm. Building D, Fort Mason Center, SF. 441-0445.

A plethora of objects ranging from the sublime to the thoroughly ridiculous are on display at the University of California at Berkeley's Lowie Museum of Anthropology under the rubric "Held in Value." The exhibit exhumes a disparate set of objects from the museum's storage areas to illustrate the many different standards according to which people have collected them.

The objects collected because of rarity or "collection value" are the type serious museum-goer expects, including items like an Aztec wooden drum and rare Egyptian and Congolese statuary. More obscure rarities like "Lindsay's Young America Pistol" also appear. A mid-19th century double-barreled pistol, only 100 were manufactured, since the unfortunate Lindsay proved unable to sell his invention to the government.

Handicrafts comprise the bulk of objects collected for native and research value: Tlingit shawls, Southwest Indian pottery, a bronze drum from Thailand. The research objects tend to be less glamorous, like an encyclopedic collection of aesthetically undistinguished Southwestern basketry, or a collection of coprolites — desiccated human feces collected and dissected to determine pre-historic diets.

Certainly the most peculiar objects were collected for curio and personal association value. A fake shrunken head from Peru hangs next to real tribal beheading knives from the Philippines; a mummified whole crocodile carries her mummified young on her back; two tiny stones shaped by the currents of the Russian River are, a turn-of-the-century letter from the donor assures us, a mortar and pestle discarded by the "Faery people." The personal association collection includes a bow belonging to Geronimo (one of dozens generously scattered by the Apache chief in attics throughout America) and General Grant's slender walking stick.

Highbrow bric-a-brac — scrimshaw and Chinese snuff bottles — fills the final display case, showing items collected because of "Western aesthetic value." Some visitors will no doubt feel they've been placed under glass themselves when the program explains that "Euro-Americans with the financial means to do so collect objects as indices of personal wealth, as a demonstration of prestige, and as a way to gain the approval and admiration of one's rivals." Those baseball card and beer mat collections may actually be "fashionable reflections of individual good taste, culture or wide interests." Admission is $1.50; 50 cents/seniors and 25 cents/children. Museum hours are Mon., Tues., Thurs. and Fri., 10:30 am-4:30 pm; Sat. and Sun., noon-4:30 pm. 103 Kroeber Hall (on Bancroft at College), University of California at Berkeley, Berk. 643-7648.

The Cable Car Museum is a tribute to one of San Francisco's most identifiable landmarks. The museum contains hundred-year-old cable cars, demonstrations of cable car mechanisms and photographs from the days when cable cars covered the city. A series of color photographs, "Gone Today... Here Tomorrow," chronicles the restoration of the system from 1982 to 1984.

The museum's greatest attractions are the giant wheels (sheaves) that power the cable car system. There is something hypnotic about the steady turning of the sheaves that pull the cables that drag the cars that carry the tourists from Market Street to Fisherman's Wharf. In the Sheave Room, on the lower level, you can see smaller sheaves spinning the cable out below ground to various parts of the city. Admission is free. Museum hours are daily, 10 am-6 pm. 1201 Mason, SF. 474-1887.

Chevron's World of Oil museum is quite a concept. What could be next? Sunset Scavenger's World of Garbage? If you wanted to find out what kind of drill head was most appropriate for digging for oil in loose dirt, a visit to the World of Oil might be in order. The museum documents the history and technology of the oil industry, with exhibits that include models of offshore oil rigs, processing plants and tankers, energy facts quiz games and historical scenes of energy use at the turn of the century.

The museum has several short educational videos. A video monitor at the entrance polls visitors' responses to statements like "We can explore for oil and still protect the environment." Opinion was divided. Admission is

AFFORDABLE SAILING

Learning to sail doesn't have to cost a fortune

By Laura Shefler

YOU'VE ALWAYS wanted to learn sail, but you didn't think you could afford it. Think again. The Bay Area has a variety of organizations that offer sailing instruction and practice time at extremely reasonable rates.

"We're the best deal on the Bay," says Kathy McGraw, vice commodore of the Cal Sailing Club, a nonprofit cooperative that makes its home in the South Sailing Basin on the Berkeley

Marina. Memberships in the club cost $40 for three months ($35 for students and seniors), and members can take as many of the free sailing lessons, conducted on Monday and Thursday afternoons and Saturday mornings, as they like. The lessons are given by members who donate their time to the club. The instructor goes out with three students in one of the club's ten Lido 14 dinghies. Lessons in the Pearson Ensign, a 22-foot keelboat not recommended for beginners, are available on Wednesday evenings from 7 to 9 pm.

A ranking system determines which boats you can sail when. At the Junior Skipper level, which can usually be reached after 12 to 15 lessons, you are eligible to take out any of the club's dinghies, which include, in addition to the Lido 14s, four Lasers, three Rhodes-19s and a number of larger boats. At this level you're encouraged to begin teaching newer members. If you teach for ten hours or more during a membership period, your fee will be waived.

After six months to a year of practice you may reach the Senior Skipper rating, which gives you the keys to the club and entitles you to take out any of the boats, including the 470, the 505s, the International Contenders and the keelboats, at any time of the day or night.

There must be a catch, right? The people at the Cal Sailing Club are the first to admit that their no-frills operation isn't for everyone. Before you join, you have to go down to the clubhouse and look around, so that you sign up with realistic expectations. Although the equipment is adequate, none of it is new or fancy. In the summer, membership swells from around 200 to as many as 600 and, "on certain beautiful Saturday mornings in June," McGraw says, you may have to wait an hour or so for your lesson. "It's a beautiful place to wait," she adds, noting the view and the attractive landscaping of the marina.

You must donate two hours of work during each membership period. Since all the instruction is offered by volunteer members, the lessons may lack consistency. On the other hand, a CSC brochure points out, some students will take advantage of the chance to see different teaching methods and techniques. Some of the instructors who have been with the club for ten or 15 years have expert knowledge of places to go and interesting currents in the Bay.

The Cal Sailing Club holds an open house the first full weekend of every month. Come down to the South Sailing Basin, and they'll take you out for a free introductory cruise in one of the dinghies or one of the keelboats. The next open house will be held Sat., July 1st, and Sun., July 2nd, from 1 to 4 pm. For more information, call 527-SAIL.

For more structured (but also more expensive) sailing instruction, there's the Cal Adventures sailing program, located at the UC Aquatics Center in the Berkeley Marina, right next to the Cal Sailing Club. Cal Adventures (642-4000), part of the University of California at Berkeley Department of Recreational Sports, makes the athletic facilities of the university available to students and to members of the community. Thousands of people each year take advantage of its outdoor activities, which include kayaking, rock climbing, skiing, rowing and travel in California and overseas.

For $90 ($80 for students), you get 15 hours of sailing instruction, with most of the time spent on the water. Each class has from six to 16 students, supervised by two instructors and an assistant. You share a Coronado 15, a 15-foot craft that has a jib and a mainsail, with one or two other students, and the instructors float from boat to boat giving information and advice.

The rigging of the Coronado 15 is relatively easy to learn, and working with this smaller boat, says Chris Nelson of Cal Adventures, will let you develop a strong sense of balance and boat mechanics. As a beginning student you'll get a thorough introduction to sailing theory and terminology. You'll learn tacking, jibbing and points of sail.

Cal Adventures's sailing instructors, drawn from the Bay Area's large pool of experienced sailors, get extensive additional training from the University of California. They are all certified in first aid and CPR. Many have been with the program for years. UC Aquatic Center Director Rob Anderson, who runs the program, has been a coach for the Olympic Committee and a member of the U.S. Sailing Team.

"We've got a wonderful resource in the Bay," says Anderson, "and so few people in the Bay Area use it." The goal of the Cal Adventures program is to give people the expertise they need to sail the Bay safely. As Nelson points out, the Bay is "pretty freezing" and you're like to get pretty wet. Carelessness can lead to hypothermia, and while Cal Adventures provides life jackets and wet suits, you'll want to bring an extra set of warm clothes to each class meeting.

Basic sailing meets only in the morning, when the winds are low. If you go on to take Intermediate Sailing you'll get even more safety training, enough to handle any emergency. You'll know what to do if the boat capsizes, or if someone falls overboard. Since the Bay is rough (CSC's McGraw says that there can be a four- to five-foot difference in water levels), you'll need these skills.

Some of the Intermediate Sailing class meetings take place in the afternoon, when the winds are high. The South Sailing Basin has lots of sheltered areas to practice in, but also plenty of open space where you can venture out into strong winds.

If you decide to go on to the advanced class, you'll get a chance to hone your high-wind skills. Advanced Sailing also offers an introduction to racing techniques.

As a graduate of Basic Sailing you can take a skills test to get permission to buy a Recreational Sailing Pass ($60 for three months), which entitles you to

CLEAN FLEET

WHEN YOU'RE OUT in your boat, you're the one who smells the water. You see the oil slicks and the floating debris. You have an interest in keeping the Bay clean. Now, a new brochure from the Oceanic Society tells you what you can do to improve local water quality while boating. Recreational boaters aren't the biggest polluters, and they can't clean up the Bay by themselves, but as the Society's Conservation Director Joan Patton says, "Every little bit helps."

Most boaters do take care of the Bay, Patton says, but some people may not know how harmful some ordinary practices can be. "Flushing the head" pours raw sewage into the water, contributing to the unsafe levels of bacteria at Bay Area marinas, and the sewage often collects on the surface, as the brochure so delicately puts it, "in the form of unpleasant solid waste." Styrofoam cups, plastic six-pack holders and fishing line and netting casually tossed overboard can cause gruesome deaths for marine mammals and seabirds. So can the oil and gas that gets pumped out with the bilge. Paints that protect the hull from barnacles also poison the water and contaminate shellfish.

If you call the Oceanic Society at 441-5970, you can get the brochure, which includes facts, statistics and tips on becoming an "environmentally sound boater." You also get a list of pump-out facilities that will empty your holding tank and dispose of your sewage properly, in a place where you won't be likely to see it again.

FOR THE BIRDS

Even though it's off-season, there's plenty for Bay Area birdwatchers to see in summer

By Carol Montgomery

BECAUSE OF MIGRATION patterns, the best season for bird watching in the Bay Area is winter. On the other hand, the warmer temperatures of summer don't drive away all bird life, and summer is definitely a more attractive time to be out of doors. Since the Bay Area offers wide-ranging habitats, from marshes to mountains, numerous species can be sighted — reportedly up to 163 on one occasion.

You don't necessarily need a working knowledge of Latin to bird-watch, and even if you aren't an ornithological expert, bird-watching affords the opportunity to explore usual surroundings from a different perspective — through a pair of binocular lenses.

Below you'll find places where birds congregate, and also where guided tours and lectures are offered for those who are interested but ignorant of the finer points of bird-watching. Contact local chapters of the Audubon Society (Golden Gate: 843-2222, Marin: 383-1770, Richardson Bay: 388-2524) to find out about regularly scheduled field trips. The society's activities are also printed in a monthly newsletter available to members.

The "Rare Bird Alert" (528-0288) is a telephone service operated by the Golden Gate chapter of the Audubon Society, detailing the locations of rare-bird sightings in Northern California. Updated weekly, the recorded message is a short cut for bird watchers who may be looking for a place to begin their search for less common species. If you should happen upon a rare bird, notify the society by leaving a message at the end of the recording.

Marin
Audubon Canyon Ranch-Stinson

Beach From now until mid-July visitors are invited to this breeding ground of more than 200 great blue herons, snowy egrets and great egrets. A half-mile hike ends at the top of the canyon and overlooks the heronry, where mating, courtship rituals and eventual hatchings occur. For the rare-bird-watcher, a golden eagle was spotted recently — one hasn't been spotted in the area for 26 years.

The ranch is open daily from 10 am to 4 pm, and offers picnic facilities. Bird-watchers should dress in layers and may borrow binoculars and obtain field guides from the bookstore. Ranch guides are available to answer questions. Bolinas Lagoon, across from the ranch, hosts common varieties of ducks, along with herons and egrets, and is noteworthy for its intrinsic beauty. No admission fee but donations are appreciated. Three and a half miles north of Stinson Beach on Hwy. 1. Info.: 868-9244.

Marin Headlands Bird-watch on the beach for shorebirds like finches, blackbirds, pelicans, sea gulls and the abundant quail. Through July free guided tours depart every Wednesday at 9 am from the visitor's center. The park is free and open daily; visitor center hours are from 8:30 am to 4:30 pm. Located in the Golden Gate National Recreation Area; take the Alexander Ave. exit after the bridge and follow the signs to Marin Headlands. For information call 331-1540.

Point Reyes National Seashore Tufted puffins are occasionally seen in the early summer and black oystercatchers all year round in the vicinity of the lighthouse rocks and cliff areas. Farther up the coast, Abbott's Lagoon is a sensitive nesting area for the endangered snowy plover in the early summer months. Take Hwy. 1 past Olema, then exit on Bear Valley Rd., which leads to the Bear Valley Visitors Center. For information call 663-1092.

Point Reyes Bird Observatory Primarily a research organization, the observatory sponsors a "Natural Excursions" program that includes weekend trips throughout the summer, and classes. Upcoming is a bird-painting class using watercolors. Researchers band birds at the visitor center in Palomarin, which is open daily from dawn to dusk. Mornings are said to be better for observing the eight species of land birds. Palomarin is reached from Hwy. 1, via Horseshoe Hill Rd. and Mesa Rd. For information call 868-1221.

Richardson Bay Wildlife Sanctuary Land birds predominate in the sanctuary during the summer, since most of the waterfowl migrate. For a self-guided tour pick up a bird guide at the yellow Victorian building housing the visitor's center. The sanctuary covers 900 acres of water and is open from 9 am to 5 pm, Wednesday through Sunday, in the summer. A science and ecology program especially for children begins in June. Admission is free for Audubon Society members, $2 for adults and $1 for children. Take Hwy. 101 to the Tiburon exit, then turn right on Greenwood Cove. For information call 388-2524.

East Bay

San Francisco National Wildlife Refuge Another spot to observe egrets is the marsh areas of this Fremont refuge off Thornton Avenue. Additionally, hummingbirds, great blue herons, shorebirds (dowitchers and sandpipers), various owls and ducks and the harder-to-see California clapper rail reside here.

The refuge is open daily from dawn to dusk and has no admission fee. Binoculars and maps are available, as are walking tours. The "Good Morning Bird-Watchers" tour begins at 9 am, but exercise isn't necessary if you opt for the "Bird Watching By Van"

SOUNDS OF SUMMER

From Jazz on the Lake to Reggae on the River, 37 Northern California music festivals and outdoor concerts

"Hell is full of musical amateurs; music is the brandy of the damned."

— George Bernard Shaw,
Man and Superman.

IF ONE AGREES with Mr. Shaw, then we in San Francisco enjoy a heavenly area, with its many extremely polished and proficient musical professionals. Summer is the season when these professionals take their skills outdoors and offer concerts surrounded by trees, under the sun, creating relaxing atmospheres for cultured enjoyment.

This guide therefore focuses on outdoor music festivals, though exceptions are made. Much cultural enjoyment is to be found this summer in the 37 festivals listed below, ranging from Mozart to O.J. Ekemode to Hank Williams, Jr. Many of the musical offerings are held in conjunction with arts expositions, food and wine festivals and just about anything you can think of. All this diversity and enjoyment leaves the demanding musical consumer with only one question: When will "thrash" heavy metal go outdoors?

In each entry there is information about the contents, location and ticketing of the event. Unless otherwise mentioned, phone numbers are area code 415. Advance ordering can often save money, and if you're planning to spend the night in the environs, it's a good idea to make hotel/campground reservations well in advance, since many others are probably making similar plans. In all events, it is best to call in person to get up-to-date ticketing and scheduling information.

Summerlong series

City Celebration Festival of Performing Arts, May 25th-Sept. 15th

This yearly series offers an extremely wide variety of music, dance and more, hailing from diverse cultures. Scheduled music includes big band jazz, Israeli dance, blues, gospel, Afro-Cuban salsa, Russian ballet and South African freedom songs. Held on Thursday afternoons from 1 to 3 pm in the pleasant surroundings of the Golden Gate Park Bandshell, the typical day features three different performers clustered about a single theme, culture or area. All performances are free. Golden Gate Park Bandshell, Museum Concourse, SF. 474-3914.

Marin Music Fest, May 28th-July 18th

This festival comprises eight concerts of classical music performed in the United Methodist Church in Mill Valley. Musicians from all over the country are scheduled to perform in the festival's eighth season. A special concert on July 18th features bassist Edgar Meyer performing classical, contemporary and improvisational works with Darol Anger and Michael Marshall. Tickets are $10; $12 for the July 18th performance. Marin Music Fest, 13 Eton Way, Mill Valley 94941. 383-0867.

Paul Masson Winery Summer Series, June 1st-Sept. 24th

Stately Paul Masson Mountain Winery presents this 32-year-old summerlong series, billed as "one of the largest of its kind anywhere in the world." More than 100 events are scheduled, running the gamut from classical to country and from jazz and folk to theater. Performers include Ray Charles, Miles Davis, Hiroshima, Roberta Flack, Chuck Mangione, Pinchas Zukerman, Joan Baez, Carlos Santana and Turtle Island Quartet. Call for prices. Paul Masson Summer Series, PO Box 1852, Saratoga 95070. (408) 741-5181 or (408) 998-BASS.

The Bay Guardian's 1989 summer concerts guide was prepared by Nick Budnick, Diana Carpenter-Madoshi, Susan Gerhardt, Wayne Jebian, Julie Lilien, Heather Mackey and Laura Shefler.

Stern Grove Midsummer Music Festival, June 18th-Aug. 20th Donated to the city by a patron of the arts in 1931, Stern Grove makes a nice setting for this 52-year-old festival. Opening on Fathers' Day with the SF Symphony Youth Orchestra, the festival continues each Sunday afternoon through Aug. 20th. The season's "hottest ticket" is New Orleans' Preservation Hall Jazz Band, but it also includes a Bastille Day bicentennial salute to French music, local African dance companies, gospel and ballet. The Festival also presents a small series of educational, performing-arts-oriented talks. The summer concludes with the well-known Jazz in the Grove concert. All concerts are free. 19th Ave. and Sloat, SF. 398-6551.

June

Chamber Music West, June 5th-21st Each June the San Francisco Conservatory of Music sponsors a series of concerts by the Bay Area's leading classical musicians. The Alexander String Quartet, the Bridge Sextet and dozens of other area musicians are scheduled to perform this year. Festival locations are the Florence Gould Theater in San Francisco, St. John's Presbyterian Church in Berkeley and Villa Montalvo in Saratoga. Tickets are $14; $10/seniors, students and members of the Conservatory or the Fine Arts Museums. 665-0874.

Health & Harmony Music & Arts Festival '89, June 10th-11th Northern California's largest health expo and crafts fair, which takes place at the Sonoma County Fairgrounds in Santa Rosa, offers music by Bay Area country, folk, rock, reggae, jazz and New Age groups. SAILING

unlimited practice time — on a first come, first served basis — in the Cal Adventures boats. With the Basic Pass, you're restricted to morning sailing, when the winds are under 15 knots, and you must stay within a limited area.
After you take Intermediate Sailing you can get an Advanced Pass that lets you take boats out during the highwind afternoon hours.

Cal Adventures' Summer Outdoor
Youth Program this year includes morning classes for children grades 3 to 6 and grades 7 to 10, with intermediate sections available in the afternoon for the older group. Each week-long session costs $95.

Cal Adventures is offering an open house June 10th, from 11 am to 5 pm, at the UC Aquatic Center. There will be sailboat rides and demonstrations of sailing, windsurfing, kayaking and sculling, as well as the opportunity to talk to instructors. Bring warm clothing if you want to sail.

If you'd like to learn to sail in a warmer, safer, less windy setting, try the Lake Merritt Boathouse. Oakland residents pay only $45 for 20 hours of basic instruction; others pay $55. The El Toros used in the beginning classes are small, responsive boats. "You can turn them on a dime," says John Balicki, the director of the boathouse.
These boats are slow-moving and hard to tip over, he adds, but they "have all the parts" necessary for training competent sailors.

You'll find yourself out on the water at the very first class. Only about 20 to 30 percent of class time is spent in lectures on land. In the beginning session you sail your own El Toro while the instructor leads the class from a motor boat.

Intermediate classes place you in the two-person Capri-14 sloop. These boats are faster — and tipper — than the El Toros, and they give you the opportunity to learn teamwork. Students who have taken the basic and intermediate courses or who have strong sailing backgrounds can sign up for lessons on the boathouse's Hobie 14
catamarans.

The boathouse offers adult and youth sections at all skill levels, and families who want to take sailing classes together can sign up for either. The adult sections tend to be more comprehensive, but the week-long daytime youth sections are more relaxed.

Some adult sections meet on weekends, some in the evening. The weekend classes will be more convenient for some people, but the evening classes put you out on the water at twilight.
The calm winds and the orange light on the buildings of downtown Oakland make for a pleasant, scenic evening, and with the colors of the sunset reflected on the surface, you're less likely to notice if the water isn't exactly azure clear.

Lake Merritt also has an adapted sailing program for people with disabilities. Seats and life jackets are adjusted to meet the needs of the individual, and this year the program offers joystick tillers like the joysticks on motorized wheelchairs. There is a scholarship program for disabled people who are on fixed incomes.

The boathouse hires only Red Cross-certified instructors. Before classes begin, you must demonstrate, either at an Oakland public pool or a pool of your own choice, that you can swim well and tread water or float.

This year, the boathouse is offering Mariner Day Camps for children.
There are sections for ages seven to ten and ten to 15; the one-week sessions cost $65 (including materials fee) for Oakland residents and $75 for non-residents. Sections are filling quickly, but the boathouse may add more. Call 444-3807 for more information. ■

OPENING NIGHT CASTRO THEATRE

5:30pm $25
Champagne Reception (includes preferred seating for film premiere at 7:00pm)

7:00pm SALUT VICTORI! $7
Canada, Dir: Anne Claire Poirier in person
In SALUT VICTORI! Anne Claire Poirier has created an intimate chamber piece around two older gay men with divergent life experiences. For Philippe, a quiet, distinguished gentleman, old age means frail health, loneliness and loss of freedom. For Victor, the wheelchair liberates, the male nurses delight, and an occasional surreptitious nip of cognac revitalizes. His gregarious, often irreverent, familiarity initially ruffles Philippe's dignified reserve. Yet gradually he warms to Victor's generous charm and a tender friendship evolves, reviving laughter, dreams, and secrets confided. 83min

9:30pm THERESE AND ISABELLE $6
France, Dir: Radley Metzger
A melancholy and romantic reminiscence of sexual awakening and first love. Ten years after leaving, Therese returns to the boarding school where she met Isabelle. Her thoughts return to their friendship and secret meetings in the school chapel and bathroom. The languorous love scenes are wonderfully tender. 102min

INFIDEL
USA, Dir: Catherine Saalfeld
Simply stated, Arroe is a black fashion model, a lesbian, who deals with issues of racism in an industry that is intolerant of variation from either the passive Anglo ideal, or that of the exoticized, primitivized woman of color. There is nothing simple about INFIDEL, however, as the film uncovers and repositions layers of myth about female beauty and racism. 45min

5:30pm OUT OF OUR TIME $6
USA, Dir: Caeli Pacilio in person
Exciting first feature OUT OF OUR TIME juxtaposes two circles of women - one a literary/artistic society of women in Chicago circa 1930, the other a contemporary group of feminists. The two circles are linked by Valerie Ward and Jacquelyn Matthews, granddaughter and grandmother respectively, both of whom, in their own eras, grapple with the frustrations of not fulfilling themselves as writers, and share a dream of being published. 70min

7:30pm NELLY TOONS $6
A Look at Animated Sissies - Vito Russo introduces a collection of classic cartoon characters, each with its own fey pirate, sissy, or rabbit in drag. Just as with live action films, these "gay" characters have been ghettoized and labelled as outsiders, but they were more often than not the only saving grace about the bad cartoons and the funniest characters in the good ones.

Sponsored by The Advocate

USA, Dir: Gregg Araki in person
The grainiest gay movie of the year is also the funniest. After his first feature, THREE BEWILDERED PEOPLE IN THE NIGHT, director-writer-producer Araki looks bound to win over everyone with THE LONG WEEKEND. The film follows Six Bewildered People (three couples: gay, lesbian and hetero), together for the first time in five years for a long weekend in Los Angeles. In the words of Rachel, the film's lesbian activist, "We're like the new Lost Generation. Pepsi doesn't even want us anymore. Me Decade dropouts aerobizing towards Armageddon..." 93min, plus-DECODINGS

Lesbian/Gay Sensibility - More Than Sex?
A panel of directors and programmers attending the festival discuss lesbian/gay sensibility in film and video.

USA, Dir: Mark Gasper in person
AN EMPTY BED is a day in the life of Bill Frayne, a gay man in his mid-50's living alone in Greenwich Village. During the course of this typical day, he encounters people, objects and places which stir and revive memories from his past. 56min

BEYOND GRAVITY
New Zealand, Dir: Garth Maxwell
Richard is a reserved, thoughtful lab technician with an obsessive interest in astronomy. Johnny is so eccentric and unpredictably romantic that he seems to have come from another planet. This may be why they are drawn to each other in BEYOND GRAVITY, the off-beat, charming story of the chaotic love. 48min

4:30pm A FLORIDA ENCHANTMENT, 1914 $4
Sex Change & Cross-Dressing in Early Silent Film
Frustrated by her fiancé's affairs, a New York heiress pops one of the magic seeds that change women into men, and men into women. But, after shaving "her" morning mustache, she forgets vengeance under newfound pleasure in embracing other women at the Ft. Lauderdale resort.

6:30pm WHAT SHALL WE DO WITHOUT DEATH $6
West Germany, Dir: Elfi Mikesch
A documentary film showing life in one of Hamburg's homes for seniors. Over the course of six months, Elfi Mikesch interviewed and filmed the inhabitants, concentrating on a female couple who are spending the rest of their lives together in a close and intimate relationship. 105min

8:30pm TAXI ZUM KLO $6

THE HISTORY OF LESBIAN HEROTICA
A presentation by Susie Bright, editor of ON OUR BACKS and HEROTICA exploring lesbian eroticism in films and videos from 70s soft-focus Euro-trash to early lesbian feminist sapphistry, from 8-grade Hollywood fantasies, to DESERT HEARTS. Susie will show explicit and provocative clips from the past two decades of lesbian sexuality on the screen, as well as introduce the contrasting perspectives of modern day lesbian erotic video makers.

9pm THE KILLING OF SISTER GEORGE $6
Great Britain, Dir: Robert Aldrich
Lesbian life is mighty grim and decidedly sadomasochistic in this lurid melodrama from the director of WHATEVER HAPPENED TO BABY JANE. But the first explicit exploration of a lesbian scene, the authentic 60s British lesbian bar scene and its hundreds of dancing dykes make this a "must see" in 89. 138min

USA, Dir: Mervyn Nelson
Both infuriating and fascinating, this is a rare opportunity to experience the plight of pre-Stonewall gay culture. Set in a New York gay bar on Christmas Eve, the film features some of the most ghoulish and exaggerated performances ever put on screen. The "New York" cast includes "Golden Girl" Rue McClanahan and the late Candy Darling as a lonely transvestite who dreams of being a real woman. 109min

9:30pm URINAL $6

Canada, Dir: John Greyson in person
Curiously transported to the present-day, a group of dead lesbian and gay artists, including Sergei Eisenstein, Frida Kahlo, Langston Hughes and Yukio Mishima, find themselves guests in the home of Toronto sculptors, Frances Loring and Florence Wyle. They have been mysteriously summoned to Ontario to research the systematic policing of public washroom sex. Part narrative and part documentary, URINAL weaves together a dazzling array of film, video and computer animation effects to explore the politics of public sex and the policing of sexuality in society. 100 min. plus-THE AIDS EPIDEMIC

6:30pm JOHANNA D'ARC OF MONGOLIA $6

West Germany, Dir: Ulrike Ottinger
In this lesbian LAWRENCE OF ARABIA, Ottinger has created an ethnographic farce which crisscrosses Europe, Asia and time itself. Travelling on the Trans-Siberian Railway, we meet an unusual group of international passengers including the sophisticated Lady Windermere, an American musical star, a prim German schoolteacher, a young Spanish adventures, and a trio of Klezmer musicians. The ladies transfer to the Trans-Mongolian Railway and are abducted by a troop of wild Mongolian women who lead them to their nomadic tents on the sweeping grasslands of Inner Mongolia. Camels, wild horses, Buddhist priests and a shaman provide a bit of culture shock for the ladies. The encounter, however, proves to be one the Mongolians won't easily forget. 165min

10:00pm TAXI TO CAIRO $6

West Germany, Dir: Frank Ripploh
Frank is back! And he and Klara seem to be made for each other. He is gay and needs a wife because his mother will disinherit him if he doesn't marry, and Klara is fed up with her fickle friends. Unfortunately, they have one too many things in common: they both love men, and so their otherwise perfect partnership is severely dented when they both fall for the hunky neighbor next door. 90min. plus-INTERIOR DECORATOR FROM HELL

Midnight PINK NARCISSUS $6

USA, Dir: Jim Bidgood
Even if you've never seen the glorious PINK NARCISSUS, you've probably dreamt about it. A young man escapes from the real world in a sequence of pink satin fantasies - he's a slave chosen by the emperor, a bullfighter, a wood nymph, a harem boy. Loved for its imaginative eroticism in 1971, it was also derided for camp content. Eighteen years later, in a brand new print, you can begin to see between the Walter Mitty premise and the Beauty School Drop-Out decor, a passionate intelligence and the spirit of Genet. 70min

Great Britain, Dir: Stuart Marshall
Stuart Marshall's forceful new film isn't just about the Holocaust. Sub-headed "Sexuality in Germany 1910-1945", it digs up a whole deal of stories leading to the Nazi extermination of lesbians and gay men. The body and nature worship cult; the defilement of same-sex friendship; the growth of gay bars; the persecution of sexual radicals - Marshall's interviews add up to a sharp analysis of the anxieties and inconsistencies in the rise of Nazism. 90 min. plus-A.I.D.S.C.R.E.E.A.M.

7:00pm NIGHT VISIONS $6

Canada, Dir: Marusia Bocurkiw in person
An exciting new lesbian drama from Canada, NIGHT VISIONS deals with issues of lesbianism and race within the context of an urban community of women fighting for its survival. The story draws from actual events, legal battles, custody cases and actions which have occurred in Canada during the last decade. These struggles are humanized through the simultaneous depiction of passionate relationships among these women - political, sexual, humorous, serious - existing amid the political turmoil of the community. 60min

Great Britain, Dir: Philip Saville
From the creator of LETTER TO BREZHNEV, a completely mad concoction of rent boys, arias and dolphins. Eddie is a shy teen queen who watches old weepies with his mum; his best pal Michael takes him to a local Liverpool drag disco hosted by a gingham-gowned Robbie Coltrane. When the boys witness a gangland murder, they head south - fast - to Brighton (Britain's Russian River) in the back seat of an aging opera star's Bentley. Things get weirder when Eddie starts skinny-dipping with a dolphin called Sooty, and Michael starts sleeping with the diva. Soon they're pursued by a sabre-wielding assassin (played by pin-up Bruce Payne) and that's when Eddie's lip-synching to Marilyn's hits just isn't enough. 103min. plus-BALLAD OF READING GAOL permanent injunction against further harassment. On December 4, 1987, he won a court order allowing him to play at BART stations without risking another arrest. The rest, as they say, is history.

When he isn't performing the strains of Mozart and Bach, Leiser is a shy individual. He chooses his words carefully and delivers them in a low, even tone.

"I've been playing here [in San Francisco] since 1985. I played two or three times at Fisherman's Wharf and decided that's not where it's at. I tried BART and found it was better."

Until he started getting arrested. "There's a certain amount of history in terms of musicians playing...and getting in trouble [at BART]. I was the first musician to win the recognition that musicians had the right to play in BART stations," Leiser says.

The general response to Leiser's artistry is good — in fact, he's one of the few street performers who earns his living solely by playing on the street. "Tell them I'm available for weddings and bar mitzvahs," he jokes.

But when it comes to his music, Leiser is quite serious. He got his start in New York City, where at the age of 16 he played Bach on Third Avenue. To this day he prefers baroque and early classical vehicles.

"Baroque requires simpler resources. It's easier to get the main idea of the music across — especially when people are in a hurry — as compared to some of the Romantic pieces."

Leiser usually plays at the Embarcadero station, though if another performer has arrived first he will move to a different spot. "Musical turf wars, maybe, but it's resolved," he says. "Musicians are more reasonable than other people."

Christopher Bishop

Christopher Bishop calls his cello "Tubs." The two are virtually inseparable, and often you can see Bishop dragging Tubs down Market Street from one BART station to the next; BART officials don't take too kindly to a passenger who carries a bulky instrument, a music stand and a chair through the narrow turnstile. Once ensconced, Bishop plays alone, or with Nick Leiser on his violin. Either way, he's happy with his life as a musician, though he supplements his income by working as a chef in North Beach.

Musically, he started out as a tenor saxophonist with avant-garde jazz groups. One day at Michigan State University he heard a cello being played in a practice room. He was converted.

"I responded to the sound, and it coincided with my spiritual development — an interest in Indian music," he says, referring to the fretless cello's tonal variety.

BART ARTISTS

to be found underground*

By Stephen Share

SUMMER IN San Francisco isn't necessarily an outdoors affair, as anyone who has lived here for any period of time knows quite well. When the fog rolls in (and even if it's hot), you may be looking for a nice indoor spot in which to savor some entertainment.

Enter the under-the-street musician. Street musicians have been around as long as the streets they perform on, and then some — the idea of music as something to be enjoyed communally and spontaneously pre-dates history. Under-the-street musicians, though following in the same tradition, are relatively new, depending as they do on modern subway stations like BART for performance spaces. These artists, especially the classically oriented musicians, find that it makes good acoustic sense to play an unamplified instrument in such a setting. In the same vein, you may find their venue a welcome change from the above-ground scene.

Viewed by some as a glorified beggar, or at best local color, the public performer is part of an ancient tradition spanning many cultures and centuries. It would be wrong to imply that all public musicians are voices of the past — especially in San Francisco, where most are anything but. By the same token, you can't say all street, or under-the-street, performers are of the highest quality. But many are genuinely talented, and love their work. Here's a look at some of the underground musicians you're likely to hear.

Nick Leiser

They may not know it, but the musicians who play at BART stations owe their freedom to perform there to Nick Leiser, an unassuming violinist who received 14 citations and spent two nights in jail for playing Bach at BART. The justification BART officials used had to do with soliciting funds and the use of unlawful sound equipment — though in fact BART had no policy on musical performances.

At some point Leiser decided he wasn't going to take it any more, and filed suit in federal court seeking damages for false imprisonment and a

He came to San Francisco 14 years ago to study with Indian musician Ali Akbar Khan. Continuing his musical studies at San Francisco State, Bishop realized that classical music spoke to him in a way other music hadn't.

"As I get older, I find that classical music addresses all my emotional states," he says.

Playing in public is therapy of sorts, Bishop finds. "If you have nerve problems, playing at BART stations is a great way to overcome them. It takes a little courage to get your art out there, but it's worth it — for yourself and the people you encounter."

Bishop says he was "really delighted" when Nick Leiser approached him and asked if he wanted to play something together. They ended up doing some Bach two-part inventions, which continue to be a standard part of their repertoire.

Speaking of money matters, Bishop says he is satisfied with the return on investment. "On a good day, playing for two hours, we get about $27 apiece," he says. But he values the less tangible things even more. "If I can go home with a couple of words thanking me for playing, that's definitely a part of it."

Gwen Jones and Norman Rutherford

You're emerging from the depths of the Powell Street Station and you hear a primordial fanfare echoing through the corridors. You search for the source — and find a man and woman blowing in to what look like mahogany two-by-fours, each about six feet tall. Meet Gwen Jones and Norman Rutherford, playing their fujaras.

In the instrument world, the fujara is nearly unheard of. Hailing from Czechoslovakia, it was originally a shepherd's flute; it can be thought of as a large recorder. Dating back to about 1100, this three-holed wind instrument is capable of only a few notes and a number of overtones brought out by breath modulation.

According to Rutherford, people respond to the unique sound. "It's a great street instrument," he says. "People really love it. It's a really accessible sound... kind of sing-songy."

Rutherford adds that for all the interest people seem to have, they are less lavish with their pocketbooks. This does not correspond with his experience in New York, where he played freebop bass with a larger street ensemble — and got considerably more fiscal support.

"In New York, you get the businessmen... they don't listen to your music necessarily, but they'll come by and put a dollar, or sometimes five dollars. Here [in San Francisco] I almost sense there's more genuine interest, but the businessmen certainly haven't been giving any money at all," he says.

On the other hand, Jones points out, the people who have the least money to spend give freely, recalling that a bag lady recently gave them a dollar. "I've really been amazed, watching the people who do give money — and it's never the people who are dressed to the hilt."

Whatever the returns, Jones and Rutherford agree that performing on the street can be difficult. "You have to be there to play for a purpose, rather than to be just wanting something," Jones says.

Rutherford adds: "You have to deal with most people showing disinterest, or only casual interest. You really can't go out there expecting to fill up your ego."

The pair have been playing together for about two years. They've collaborated on sound scores, and received the Isadora Duncan Award for original sound score (for Contraband's

THEATER

ASHLAND AS YOU LIKE IT

Ashland, Oregon has a lot to offer in addition to the Shakespeare Festival

By Steve Warren

WHEN PEOPLE SAY they're going to Ashland, Oregon "for the Shakespeare," they may mean any number of things. What they probably don't mean is that they're going to Ashland for the Shakespeare.

Ashland, 15 miles north of the California border on I-5, is the home of the Oregon Shakespearean Festival, but the Festival does more than Shakespeare (only four of this year's 11 plays are by the Bard) and most visitors combine playgoing with the outdoor pleasures the region offers. Even the most single-minded theater enthusiast can't help noticing the area around Ashland was planned by the Greatest Set Designer of All.

We'll get to the theater, the reason for my annual pilgrimage, in a moment. Ashland's other major industry is Southern Oregon State University, so you have academics rubbing elbows with showfolk in a small town that has the feel of having been settled by hippies who moved farther than Noe Valley when the Summer of Love ended.

There are a number of Victorian houses (as if you have to drive 350 miles to see those) in Ashland and even more in neighboring historic Jacksonville. Nearby lakes and mountains offer the full gamut of snow-related activities in winter and water sports in summer. Mount Ashland, 7,523 feet high, is said to have good skiing, and the Rogue and Klamath Rivers offer whitewater rafting for adventurers and jetboaters for those less inclined to exert themselves.

If you want to get away from it all,

but not too far, it's incredibly peaceful in Lithia Park, adjacent to the Festival in downtown Ashland.

Speaking of the OSF, this is its 54th season, running from mid-February through the end of October. There are three theaters, two indoor and one outdoor. On a spring visit before the outdoor Elizabethan Stage opened, I was able to see five plays in three days — my idea of a vacation, unfortunately.

OSF production values are generally high. Many technical people work the "I-5 corridor" from Seattle to San Diego, including stops in Ashland, the Bay Area and OSF's new offshoot in Portland. Play selection is geared toward a less than totally sophisticated audience — not the Hee Haw crowd, but not the most demanding San Franciscan either. This has been changing in recent years, with a trend toward more adventurous programming. Some plays on this year's schedule wouldn't have been considered ten years ago.

Overall, this year's shows are below OSF's very high average, but only one of the five I saw came close to being bad — and even that had its moments. There were none of the usual frothy comedies, no absolute uppers. Four of the plays are related to war, the fifth to urban blight.

Best of the lot is the perennial Cyrano de Bergerac, in a translation by Anthony Burgess. It's the kind of large-cast epic crowd-pleaser OSF does well, and Henry Woronicz is excellent in the title role, with his nose and performance scaled within human dimensions.

Under James Edmondson's direction the lengthy (three hours, 20 minutes) show hasn't quite the momentum it needs, but it has humor, romance, swordfights and — Cyrano's favorite word — panache.

The only other play with some claim to "classic" status is Arthur Miller's All My Sons, which took the ballsy step for 1947 of trying to wake the country from the American dream. Today the stuff of daily headlines, the idea that cutthroat competition for defense contracts could produce inferior merchandise that results in the death of our soldiers was incredibly heavy in the era of postwar idealism, and surely triggered some of Miller's problems with the McCarthy hearings.

Lacking shock value except in hindsight, the play today has to stand on its merits as a family drama, and those legs are a little shaky. Perhaps inspired by Blue Velvet, the OSF production begins on a deceptively sunny and funny mid-morning. It then literally turns darker, the lights reaching a level by noon where they remain past 8 pm.

Richard Elmore has all the essential elements in his performance as Joe Keller, a father who doesn't know best, who sold his soul for defense contracts and lost a son in the bargain. Cristine McMurdo-Wallis is exceptionally good as his wife, still in denial about their son's death three years earlier.

The play's revelations pour out melodramatically near the end; but despite this structural clumsiness, All My Sons contains long passages of brilliant writing that show Miller at his best.

Jeanne Paulsen does a nice job, except when she has to deliver an excessive narration, as Helen, the cripple who lurches at a chance for happiness with a soldier who turns out to be mar-

SLIMMER PICKINGS

There's plenty of theater to see this summer, but nothing like the major festivals of previous years

By Misha Berson

FOR THE PAST decade, the Bay Area summer theater calendar has usually boasted at least one big, ambitious festival of new vaudeville, new plays or new experimental work. Guess what kids: It's time to gear down expectations for the cash-poor 1990s.

Don't get me wrong. There's still plenty of local theater to take in this summer — clustered events, along with individual plays opening at commercial and rep playhouses. And who can tell; maybe there's another mondo festival year coming up soon on the horizon. Just don't expect any groundbreaking international convocations this time around. In today's squeeze-play arts economy, expensive, high-risk festival ventures are growing as rare as budget surpluses.

Looking on the bright side, this summer you can still get your annual fix of Shakespeare and the San Francisco Mime Troupe, take a workshop in juggling or playwrighting if you're so inclined and expose yourself to fresh-off-the-computer plays. And, if you want to go for the really "safe" and schmaltzy, there's a touring production of Fiddler on the Roof arriving at the Golden Gate Theatre on June 29th, with Israeli actor Topol starring as Tevye.

More adventuresome souls will want to consider these upcoming events: The Berkeley Shakespeare Festival The popular company wraps up 16 years at Berkeley's John Hinkel Park with three shows about love and power games between the sexes. Slated are Peggy Shannon's staging of Taming of the Shrew, set in a "neo-punk cafe" (Kate and Petruchio do SOMA?); an Italian Renaissance version of Romeo and Juliet — which, thanks to high-school reading lists, remains Shakespeare's greatest hit — directed by Julian Lopez-Morillas; and a World War II take on Measure for Measure that marks the Bay Area return of award-winning director Richard E.T. White after a two-year absence. All three shows play outdoors in rolling repertory between June 30th and Aug. 11th.

The season ends in September with an indoor run of Much Ado About Nothing at Julia Morgan Center, under Michael Addison's direction. In 1990 the festival moves to its new amphitheater in Orinda, and begins calling itself the California Shakespeare Festival. For information about this year's festival and tickets call 525-8845.

The San Francisco Mime Troupe A young Jewish-American and a young Palestinian-American who look exactly alike cross paths on Israel's strife-torn West Bank. This is the stuff of comedy? Yes indeed, if the fearless SF Mime Troupe is in charge. Co-written with Israeli writer/actor Sinai Peter and Palestinian writer/performer Emily Shihadeh, the Mime Troupe's Seeing Double could be one of its most politically provocative shows in years — and maybe one of its funniest. It opens July 4th at Mission Dolores Park and plays at other Bay Area parks through Sept. 4th. All performances are free, but donations are vigorously encouraged. To obtain a schedule contact the Mime Troupe at 285-1717.

The Asian American Play Festival The Magic Theatre hosts six weeks of play premieres, dance-theater pieces and panel discussions focusing on a diverse crop of works by Asian American artists. There will be world premiere productions of poet-playwright Jessica Hagedorn's Filipino family encounter, Holy Food; James Yoshimura's baseball drama, Ohio Tip-Off; and Rosenna Alfarro's Barrancas, a story of political intrigue set in Central America, plus new work from Paul Kwan, Arnold Iger and other experimental performers. The festival runs July 12th through Aug. 20th at the Magic Theatre, Fort Mason Building D, SF. Call 441-8001 for more information.

The San Francisco New Vaudeville Festival This fourth annual gathering of professional fools and clowns won't present public performances this year, focusing instead on helping performers develop their skills and visions through workshops and forums. The biggest draw should be an acting seminar by Academy Award winner (for Amadeus) F. Murray Abraham. Working performers may also take "clinics" on juggling, improvisational storytelling and vocal skills. An open dialogue on "New Vaudeville Past and Present" with major local theater critics happens on Monday, June 19th, at the American Conservatory Theatre offices, 450 Geary, SF, at 6 pm, followed at 7:30 pm by a lecture by Pickle Family Circus director Judy Finelli on the state of contemporary circus in the Soviet Union. Workshops range in cost from $40 to $150; the forum and lecture are both free. For details call 338-7778.

The Bay Area Playwrights Festival and West Coast Playwrights Scaling down and shifting operations from Marin to San Francisco, the Bay Area Playwrights Festival plans full-scale productions of Genny Lim's Bitter Cane plus one other to-be-chosen script, along with staged readings of up to eight other new plays. Of special interest is "Other Voices," a program of readings from the disabled writers' workshop at the Mark Taper Forum in Los Angeles, coordinated by playwright and former Bay Guardian theater critic Irene Oppenheim. All events take place between Aug. 16th and Sept. 2nd at Life on the Water Theatre and Cowell Theatre, both at Fort Mason.

Earlier this summer, between June 25th and July 23rd, the offshoot West Coast Playwrights organization offers a series of writing workshops and informal readings of new plays at the Marin Theatre Company in Mill Valley. Joseph Chaikin, Rinde Eckert, Irene Fornes and Ellen McLaughlin are among the instructors. For information call 924-0113.

ried. The experience leaves her stronger and better able to face a postwar future.

Those three plays are in the large indoor Angus Bowmer Theatre. Nightingale is on hiatus from July 9th to Sept. 13th, and closes Oct. 27th. The final performance of All My Sons is Sept. 10th; Cyrano closes Oct. 29th. Pericles Prince of Tyre has joined the repertory for the rest of the season, and Stephen Poliakoff's Breaking the Silence opens July 30th.

The outdoor Elizabethan Stage hosts performances through Oct. 1st, with Much Ado About Nothing, Henry IV, Part Two and The Two Gentlemen of Verona in repertory.

Smaller and — dare I say riskier? — plays are consigned to the 138-seat Black Swan Theatre, where Athol Fugard's The Road to Mecca opens July 7th. The two already in production there appeal to somewhat specialized audiences.

Not About Heroes is a play for people who would just as soon attend a poetry reading. Stephen MacDonald has found a dramatic context in which two poets can read their poetry to each other.

Wilfred Owen and Siegfried Sassoon were British soldiers in World War I who were turned against war by their exposure to it. They met at Craiglockhart Hospital for Nervous Disorders in July 1917. Owen was there because his first taste of battle had left him with nightmares and a stammer; Sassoon was more of a political prisoner, confined to discredit his published anti-war sentiments. In three months together they formed an intense friendship. MacDonald doesn't suggest whether it had a physical dimension (Owen, at least, is thought to have been gay), or whether they sublimated their passion for each other in passion against the war.

In any case, Sassoon is shown as Owen's mentor, who soon finds his own work surpassed by that of his student. Owen returns to the war he hates, feeling he must earn the right to oppose it by fighting in it. Sassoon also returns for his own reasons, and is wounded for his trouble.

Wilfred Owen becomes a hero before being fatally shot one week before the Armistice, but this play, like his poetry, "is not about heroes...." It's about poets.

In real life Owen had a mustache, Sassoon didn't; the actors reverse that. Remi Sandri can't get Owen's accent right but otherwise conveys his youthful emotion commendably. Michael Kevin is consistently and convincingly bland as the taciturn Sassoon.

My only clue to the proper audience for Janusz Glowacki's Hunting Cockroaches came from the enthusiastic response of a group of high school students to some of the play's more bizarre moments. The story is of an actress and her writer husband who have emigrated from Poland to a rat-infested New York tenement. She can't get work because of her accent (Did she go up against Sally Kirkland for Anna?) and he has writer's block but does part-time teaching: "Who can lecture about Franz Kafka to students who drive to school in sports cars?"

They exchange memories of Poland and observations about America during one long, sleepless night, interrupted periodically by flashback and fantasy figures who pop out from under their bed, effectively lit in green. The play seems to be saying that the U.S. isn't much better than Poland, but the emigres decide arbitrarily to stay here anyway.

Robynn Rodriguez is very good in a role she looks too young for, and Robert Lisell-Frank's OK, though he might be more colorful, as her husband. The play has some wit and humor but is never totally engaging, and I found its treatment of insomnia to be nervous-making. Hunting Cockroaches closes June 24th; Not About Heroes Oct. 27th.

A call or letter to the Festival will get you a brochure that includes a visitor's guide to Southern Oregon, including information about lodging and attractions. Write to the Oregon Shakespearean Festival, PO Box 158, Ashland, OR 97520, or phone (503) 482-4331.

MUSICIANS

1986 production of Religaree). Rutherford until recently drove a truck to make ends meet; Jones earns her living exclusively in the music field. They also give occasional concerts together.

Playing in BART stations places different acoustical demands on the two performers. They say they must listen to each other more closely, and work harder at projecting. Jones says it's "like running a marathon." The result, when playing in a quiet acoustic environment, is smooth sailing.

Rutherford and Jones play at BART about three times a week, on Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays in the late afternoon.

Kathleen Mertz

That Kathleen Mertz plays the cello at all is due to an offhand remark. She was 21, and a singer. She once wondered aloud to her mother whether she should take up an instrument for when her voice gave out, and her mother said, "Try the cello." She made the switch, and has never gone back.

Her initiation to outdoor playing took place on New Year's Day in 1988. Her friend, flutist Max Baldonado, suggested they play together in the rotunda of the Palace of Fine Arts.

"It was bitterly cold — I could only last about 15 minutes — but that's what started it," she says. "It had never occurred to me to play in public."

Since then, Mertz has become a regular at BART stations and at Ghirardelli Square, where she plays outside near the fountain. For a time she played in BART with Nick Leiser, but they parted ways due to musical differences.

"I feel that I approach the cello more lyrically, because of my singing background," she says.

Mertz's love of the instrument and the music she plays comes before all else, including the hard realities of making a living. "I call this my great experiment," Mertz says. "If I never try, I'll never know.... Whatever happens, I'll continue to play the cello. This is the way I want to go."

About 12 years ago, she had a job playing in the Beverly Hills school system. With a pianist, "I would play entire works, and I talked with the kids about music. I'd like to do something like that here."

As far as alternate venues for her art, she would enjoy playing in hotel lobbies at some point. For now, she is content giving formal recitals occasionally, as well as performing at Ghirardelli Square and BART.

"No two days are alike," she says. "I'm really with what I'm doing."

How long do street musicians last? It varies. Raymond Chandler has been playing the streets for some eight years, and is about to take an extended leave due to dental problems.

"I want to move up from being a street musician to a janitor... it's a pretty sad statement," says Chandler, who is pictured on a poster of "Famous San Francisco Street Musicians."

Chandler says that over the last two or three years, the situation has become much grimmer; people are giving less than ever. "Call it Reaganomics," he says, launching into the sprightly notes of Mozart's Eine Kleine Nachtmusik while busy travelers rush to catch their train.

Holy Headgear! Batman breezes into theaters June 23rd.

SON OF SEQUEL

Most of the summer's "blockbuster" movies are sequels to past hits

By Steve Warren

WHEN THE MOST original idea Hollywood can come up with is a new version of Batman, you know it's going to be a long summer. The gap between major studio releases and foreign or independent "art" films seems widest at this time of year, but there are a few potential sleepers in movies the studios hope will be the source of future sequels and remakes.

Take Young Einstein for instance, a rock'n'roll biography that was written, produced and directed by and stars someone named Yahoo Serious. With a name like Yahoo Serious he's got to be good, and the movie is Australia's hottest homegrown product since the "Crocodyl" Dundees. It's coming July 28th from Warner Bros., the studio that's otherwise pinning its summer hopes on Batman (June 23rd), Lethal Weapon 2 (July 14th) and Clint Eastwood's disappointing Pink Cadillac.

Paramount follows Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade and Star Trek V: The Final Frontier on Aug. 11th with Black Rain, a mismatched-cops thriller that teams Michael Douglas with Ken Takakura in Tokyo. Directed by Ridley Scott, it's got strong enough advance word that Touchstone has moved their Tom Selleck starrer Hard Rain back to the fall to avoid confusion.

Meanwhile, Touchstone/Disney has five summer films, the most promising of which is the July 14th reissue of Peter Pan. This month has already brought Robin Williams as a prep school teacher in Dead Poets Society, to be followed June 23rd by Rick Moranis as a clumsy scientist in Honey, I Shrank the Kids. Judging from the trailer — and trailers can be deceiving — the best thing about that one (besides its grammar) will be the accompanying Roger Rabbit cartoon, Tummy Trouble.

July 28th brings Turner and Hooch, with Tom Hanks as a detective in what sounds like a remake (already?) of K-9. Finally, Aug. 14th brings something "Disneyesque" from the Disney people, Cheetah, a "heartwarming" adventure about an American family in Kenya.

Summer comes to Orion Pictures June 30th with Dennis Quaid as Jerry Lee Lewis and Winona Ryder as his 13-year-old cousin/wife in Great Balls of Fire, which could form a '50s rock star trilogy with La Bamba and The Buddy Holly Story. The Heart of Dixie, postponed from spring, features Ally Sheedy, Virginia Madsen and Phoebe Cates as Southern coeds in 1957. Weird Al Yankovic brings his offbeat humor to UHF, in which he plays the manager of a low-power TV station.

Terry Jones has a weirder sense of humor, which he lavishes on Erik the Viking, hopefully the funniest cinematic quest since Monty Python beat Indiana Jones to the Holy Grail. Rude Awakening, due Aug. 11th, is yet another comedy. Eric Roberts and Cheech Marin play two '60s dropouts who drop back in and are shocked by the yuppie phenomenon. (Didn't the San Francisco Mime Troupe do that story a year or two ago?)

Aside from the already-open Road House, MGM/UA promises nothing for summer but the 16th "official" James Bond adventure, License to Kill. Come July 14th we'll see if Timothy Dalton is more comfortable in the role his second time around. Universal has only one summer sequel, Richard Lester's Return of the Musketeers, slated for August release. Renegades opened last week, and Spike Lee's provocative Do the Right Thing, about racial tensions in Bedford-Stuyvesant, is due June 30th.

July 28th brings what sounds like a gender-switch version of Housekeeping. Uncle Buck was written and directed by John Hughes, and features John Candy as an unlikely babysitter. Two weeks later we progress from guardianship to Parenthood, a Ron Howard-directed comedy starring Steve Martin.

Sylvester Stallone takes another risky step outside the Rambo and Rocky personae to play Frank Leone, a prison inmate battling wicked warden Donald Sutherland, in Lock Up, coming Aug. 4th from Tri-Star. Otherwise, Columbia Pictures can count on Ghostbusters II and The Karate Kid Part III to cover three riskier releases: The Adventure of Milo and Otis, a Japanese animal adventure about the friendship between a dog and a cat, in a new American cut with Dudley Moore narrating; Casualties of War, a David Rabe drama about a moral dilemma in Vietnam starring Sean Penn and Michael J. Fox and directed by Brian De Palma; and Billy Crystal and Meg Ryan in Rob Reiner's romantic comedy When Harry Met Sally...

Not having done so well with its sequels to Cocoon and The Fly, 20th Century Fox is going with originals this summer. If you argue that The Abyss is the third undersea monster movie this year, they'll counter that it inspired the two lower-budget imitations that made it to the screen faster; and besides, this is the story of the relationship between loving ex-spouses Ed Harris and Mary Elizabeth Mastrantonio, who just happen to be fighting monsters under the sea. The 70mm version opens July 28th.

Andrew McCarthy and Jonathan Silverman are insurance company types mixed up in romance and murder in Weekend at Bernie's. Mark Harmon is only involved in romance in Worth Winning, in which he has to get engaged to three women in as many months to win a bet. Millennium has Kris Kristofferson investigating a plane crash caused by time traveler Cheryl Ladd.

The Punisher stars Dolph Lundgren and is probably exactly what it sounds like, but Kung Fu Master was directed by France's Agnes Varda (Vagabond) and is not at all what it sounds like. The Music Teacher was Belgium's Academy Award contender this year. The Rainbow is the Ken Russell-D.H. Lawrence prequel to Women in Love, so even art films fall into that syndrome occasionally. But the hottest summer item on the art circuit, especially after winning the Palme d'Or at the Cannes Film Festival, is Steven Soderbergh's sex, lies and videotape. In it, James Spader interviews women about their sex lives, stirring things up for his college chum (Peter Gallagher), chum's wife (Andie MacDowell) and her sister (Laura San Giacomo). Watch for it in August.

free. Museum hours are Mon.-Fri., 8:30 am-3:30 pm. 555 Market, SF.

THE BAY AREA has several excellent science museums that aim to open up the natural world to adults and children alike. Many of the exhibits at these museums are interactive, so learning is by participation. Visiting one of the museums described below is both a fun and educational way to spend a summer day.

The Exploratorium is perhaps the Bay Area's most popular science museum. It's a tremendous hall filled with more than 600 amazing gadgets, contraptions and demonstrations. People wait for months to experience the Exploratorium's famous "Tactile Dome," in which you grope around in the dark exploring with only your sense of touch (call 561-0362 Mon.-Fri. between 2 and 4 pm to make reservations).

Other exhibits, which don't require reservations, investigate vision, smell, hearing and the forces of nature. Ever wonder what Vanna White would look like upside down? An Exploratorium display shows that the answer is more interesting than you might imagine. There's a machine that tests your ability to differentiate smells and another exhibit lets you whisper to a friend 40 feet away across a crowded, noisy room without any electronic amplification.

The theory behind the Exploratorium is that people will learn more about science if the exhibits are fun. But there are so many things to do at the Exploratorium that it would take a remarkably patient child or adult to try to understand each exhibit before running off to the next. Nonetheless, the Exploratorium is fascinating, and if nothing else will introduce visitors to the magical side of science.

Admission passes are good for six months of unlimited visits. $5 for adults; $2.50 for senior citizens; $1 for children six-17; free for children under six. All admissions free on the first Wed. of every month, and every Wed. after 6 pm. Museum hours are Wed., 1-9:30 pm; Thurs. and Fri., 1-5 pm; Sat. and Sun., 10 am-5 pm. Between July 4th and Labor Day the museum will open Wed.-Fri. at 11 am. 3601 Lyon, SF. 563-3200.

The Lawrence Hall of Science way up in the Berkeley hills has a spectacular view of Berkeley, the Bay and downtown San Francisco. Inside, the museum is packed with fun, interactive exhibits that are less flashy than the Exploratorium's but more successful in conveying basic scientific concepts.

Automated games and microcomputers dotted throughout the museum quiz visitors on environmental questions and math and word problems. Players of the game "T. Rex" are forced to consider what kinds of food the king of the dinosaurs would eat and how to stalk prey without scaring it away.

"T. Rex" and the other exhibits of the LHS encourage people to think about the buttons they're pressing and the phenomena they're witnessing. The Biology Lab lets you examine living, gentle animals. The Wizard's Lab runs staff-supervised physical science experiments. Both the Biology Lab and the Wizard's Lab will offer daily drop-in workshops and extended summer hours starting June 26th.

Every Wednesday from June 28th to Aug. 23rd is a "Science Funday." Special events include, at no additional cost, National Ice Cream Day (July 19th) and Animal Adventures (Aug. 9th). Admission is $3.50 for adults on weekends; $2.50 for adults on weekdays; $2.50 for children 7-18, students and senior citizens; free for children under 7. Museum hours are Mon.-Fri., 10 am-4:30 pm; Sat., 10 am-5 pm;

Sun., noon-5 pm. Centennial Dr., Berk. 642-5132.

If you were looking for the Bay Area's fastest growing museum, Corte Madera's Town Center Mall is probably one of the last places you'd look. But that's where you'll find the Bay Area Discovery Museum. This innovative museum for children will move in a year and a half to a much bigger complex in East Fort Baker, a more logical site for an environmental science museum. Until then it will remain nestled between World Savings and the Thrifty Drug and Discount Store.

From these humble beginnings, the Bay Area Discovery Museum has developed an impressive selection of programs geared toward introducing two- to 12 year-olds to environmental concerns and relationships. The Discovery Museum incorporates creative activities like drawing and role-playing as tools for learning. Playing on the museum's fishing boat, the SS Discovery, teaches children about the delicate relationship between Bay Area fisherman and the animals that live in the Bay. Another exhibit shows children how the environment we live in shapes the houses we build. Children are then invited to design their own model homes, using real architect's tools.

This summer the Discovery Museum is offering several summer programs. "Footprints in Time" is a three-part program to teach kids about the diversity of Bay Area wildlife, the dangers that threaten our environment and how we can protect it. Quilt making and other arts programs are also available. Admission is $1 for ages two and above; free for children under two; free admission the first Thurs. of each month from 5-8 pm. Museum hours are Wed.-Sun., 11 am-5 pm. 428 Corte Madera Town Center, Corte Madera. 456-8797.

Dolphins in Golden Gate Park? It might not be the ideal dolphin environment, but the California Academy of Sciences is the kind of old-fashioned natural history museum packed with curios from all over the world where everything seems a little out of place.

There are no fancy computers in the Academy of Sciences. There are lots of glass cases with stuffed exotic animals set in front of painted backgrounds. The Human Cultures exhibit shows "typical" living environments of people from all over the world — Eskimos, South American Indians, Australian aborigines. There are dinosaur skeletons and living reptiles.

And, of course, there is the aquarium, which houses seals along with the dolphins as well as penguins and tanks of fish from all over the world. At the "Fish Roundabout" you stand in the middle of an enormous circular tank that makes you feel like a scuba diver off the California coast.

The "Safe Quake" exhibit's shake table simulates an earthquake while you watch footage of buildings collapsing in front of you. The Discovery Room has things for kids to pick up and examine — fossils, shells, skins and bones.

The Academy of Sciences is now showing a collection of more than 100 of Gary Larson's hilarious Far Side cartoons in an exhibit called the "Far Side of Science." The exhibit takes advantage of the fact that Larson's humor often explores natural phenomena, and uses the cartoons as a learning tool.

The Academy's Morrison Planetarium puts on "Sky Shows" every day and "Laserium" light and music shows Thursday through Sunday nights. The Academy of Sciences also runs summer classes for both youngsters and adults (call 750-7100 for information). Admission is $4 for adults; $2 for seniors and children 12-17; $1 for children six-11; free for children under six and for all on the first Wed. of every month. Museum hours are daily, 10 am-5 pm. Museum Concourse, Golden Gate Park, SF. 750-7145.

tour at 2 pm. Both tours are only on the weekends. From SF, south on Hwy. 101 and across Dumbarton Bridge taking Thornton Ave. turnoff, then right on Marsh Land Rd. For information call 792-0222.

Peninsula

San Francisco Bay Bird Observatory This private, nonprofit organization focuses on research but conducts some bird-watching field trips from its headquarters on the SF Bay National Wildlife Refuge. If you care about bird conservation, then sign up as a volunteer for several of the sanctuary's projects. Monitor the breeding cycles of herons and egrets on Blair Island, study shorebird usage of the salt ponds and mud flats used by more than 200,000 birds during migration or help prevent epidemics of avian botulism by picking up dead birds afflicted with the disease. 1290 Hope, Alviso. For information call (408) 946-6548.

Ocean Outings

Oceanic Society Not all is lost for summer bird-watching if you are willing to take to the ocean and shell out $50 for a good cause. Every Saturday and Sunday (and some select Fridays) through Nov. 12th, the nonprofit Oceanic Society schedules a day trip to the Farallon Islands. In addition to being a regular haunt for the blue and humpback whales, the islands serve as the largest West Coast rookery for marine birds south of Alaska. Among the species regularly sighted are tufted puffins, pigeon guillemots, common murres, rhinoceros auklets, black oystercatchers and pelagic cormorants. Jaegers, shearwaters, albatross and pelicans are also encountered from time to time, though they're under no obligation to show up simply because a group of observers has paid to see them.

The trips are made on comfortable, Coast Guard-approved 80-foot vessels. However, motion sickness is still a danger, and participants are advised to practice "gastric awareness." For this reason, children under the age of ten are not allowed on these trips. The boat leaves at 9 am from the San Francisco Municipal Yacht Club on Scott Street and returns around 5 pm. Advance reservations are required and may be made by calling 474-3385. One more thing: no one but the Coast Guard and select scientists actually gets to set foot on the islands, since we humans have all too great an impact on frail wildlife habitats.

Whale Center Outings The Whale Center is another nonprofit conservation and education organization working for whales and their ocean habitat. Again, species best spotted in the summer include the tufted puffin, common murre, rhinoceros auklet, parasitic jaeger, sooty shearwater and black-footed albatross. More than 200,000 seabirds nest and feed in the Gulf of Farallones National Marine Sanctuary, featuring a vast assemblage of visiting birds from the Arctic and New Zealand.

Eight- and 12-hour cruises depart Sausalito, with several cruises geared for bird watchers, each weekend until Nov. 11th. On June 11th a trip ventures to Cordell Bank National Marine Sanctuary and beyond, into water deeper than 1,000 fathoms, all in the quest for unusual birds. Regular voyages are $50 per person; the 12-hour Cordell Bank trip is $79 per person. For reservations and scheduling information call 654-6621.

9th The Luther Burbank Center in Santa Rosa hosts this county-wide showcase of Sonoma arts with classical, rock, jazz and blues music along with other arts events. Featured artists are Wild Brides, I World, Broken Ties and jazz singer Ylonda Nickell. The festival ends with a scholarship presentation to talented children and young adult artists. Tickets are $2; $5/carload; free for children and seniors. 50 Mark West Springs, Santa Rosa 95403. (707) 527-7006.

In Performance at Forest Meadows, July 7th-23rd This is a three-week outdoor performing arts festival at the Forest Meadows Amphitheater at Dominican College in San Rafael. Some headliners are Kotoja and the Caribbean All Stars, the Good Ol' Persons, David Auerbach, Pete Escovedo, Marga Gomez, the Brazilian Beat and the Kulintang Arts Ensemble. The Harmony Sweepstakes A Cappella competition is also a part of the festival and is held July 8th. Tickets are $5-$12. 27 Kensington, San Anselmo 94960. 457-0811.

The Fifth Annual Harmony Sweepstakes, July 8th This competition is becoming the place on the West Coast to go see new a cappella acts before they make the big time. Considering the recent popularity that a cappella singing is enjoying, this year's festival ought to be one of the best. Harmony Sweepstakes, 209 Vendola Dr., San Rafael 94903. Call 492-2217 for ticket information.

Mendocino Music Festival, July 12th-22nd This third-year event brings fine music to a 600-seat tent in the Mendocino Headlands State Park. The program includes orchestral and chamber music, opera and jazz, with some more popular shows being the Piano Duo Schnabel and the Shostakovich String Quartet. Lodging is scarce in the area, so make reservations now. Tickets are $10-$5; $5 for kids. Mendocino Music Festival Association, PO Box 1808, Mendocino 95460. (707) 937-2044.

Midsummer Mozart Festival, July 12th-Aug. 5th The Midsummer Mozart Festival celebrates its 15th anniversary this year with George Cleve conducting a program of three orchestra concerts featuring the music of you-know-who. Each orchestra program plays at Herbst Theatre in San Francisco, Memorial Auditorium in Stanford and Zellerbach Auditorium in Berkeley. The festival also includes a series of Herbst Theatre chamber concerts and a gala concert July 29th at Davies Symphony Hall. Tickets are $21, $17 and $10. Tickets for the gala concert are $34, $27 and $18. World Trade Center, suite 280, SF 94111. 762-BASS or 781-5932.

Carmel Bach Festival, July 17th-Aug. 6th This festival offers a jam-packed calendar of concerts presenting Bach and his peers that takes place in several Carmel locations. Performers include trumpet player Wolfgang Basch, guitarist Angel Romero, pianist Janina Fialkowska and the Danish Piano Trio. One highlight is the Wednesday night concerts held at the Carmel Mission Basilica by candlelight, each with a different European city as its focus. Tickets are $14-$30 for each concert; recitals are $5. Sunset Cultural Center, PO Box 575, Carmel-by-the-Sea, 93921. (408) 624-2046.

Cabrillo Music Festival, July 20th-30th This popular and innovative concert series has gotten rave reviews as "California's hottest little music festival." Hear works from the Baroque period, see the Cambodian Court Musicians and Dancers, hear the best of West Coast composers and more. The Cabrillo Festival Orchestra and diverse guest musicians collaborate to put on an interesting set of shows in a variety of locations in Santa Cruz. Most concerts are $19. Cabrillo Music Festival, 6500 Soquel, Aptos 95003.

Izzies The Izzies are the annual Isadora Duncan Dance Awards, created five years ago by DANCE Bay Area and given annually to the Bay Area's top performers, choreographers, designers, composers and other dance professionals. Thirty finalists have been selected for six awards, and the winners are announced at tonight's ceremony. Performers tonight include LINES Dance Company, Della Davidson and the Moving Company, Hula Bird, Harupin-Ha Butoh Dance Theater, Margaret Jenkins and Rinde Eckert. There are also film clips of performances by Terry Sendgraff and Motivity company dancers. 8 pm, Herbst Theatre, Van Ness and McAllister, SF. $14-$18. 552-3656.

Ceramics Lecture Richard Shaw speaks tonight about his porcelain sculptures with decal overglazes and paints, the last of a three-lecture series sponsored by the SF Craft & Folk Art Museum entitled "The Art of Fiber, Glass and Clay." 8 pm, Firehouse, Fort Mason Center, Buchanan at Marina, SF. $5-$6. 775-0990.

Peter Case L.A. singer/songwriter Case gives a concert tonight, his first headlining gig in the area since the release of his much-touted new record, his second as a solo artist. He's a dynamic performer, comfortable on stage yet unpretentious, and well worth seeing even if you're not a huge fan of his records (I liked his first one well enough, but but I found his gig earlier this year at the Sacred Grounds much more spontaneous and satisfying). His music has certainly had an impact on local musicians, and perhaps it's figures like Case that have inspired members of the "new folk" music scene, and made it stand out locally as strongly as it does. 10:15 pm, Berkeley Square, 1333 University, Berk. $5. 849-3374. (Peter Case also plays a free show Wed/14 with Chuck Prophet & Stephanie Finch at 10:30 pm, I Beam, 1748 Haight, SF. 668-6023.)

★ ROVA Lecture/Demonstration The four members of the locally-based and innovative ROVA Saxophone Quartet play and talk about their music this afternoon. 5 pm, SF Community Music Center, 544 Capp, SF. Free. 647-6015. (ROVA performs new compositions by Henry Threadgill, Chris Brown and quartet members Fri/16-Sat/17 at 8 pm, Theater Artaud, 450 Florida, SF. $12. 762-BASS.)

★ The Movie Stars Heck-ola is the title of the new record from the local folk-rock quartet The Movie Stars, who are playing their fun and lively music tonight to celebrate its release. The Genuine Diamelles also perform, and the whole show is free. 9 pm, Slim's, 333 11th St., SF. 621-3330.

14/Wednesday

★ Tony Hillerman Albuquerque-based author Hillerman (Skinwalkers and A Thief of Time among others) reads tonight from his newest novel, Talking God, an interpretation in detective fiction of the Navajo culture and the Southwest. He is the past president of the Mystery Writers of America, and has received the Silver Spur Award (among others) for best novel set in the West. 8 pm, Black Oak Books, 1491 Shattuck, Berk. Free. 486-0698.

Alice Walker Author Alice Walker reads from her work tonight as part of a tenth-anniversary celebration for Lyon-Martin Women's Health Services, a non-profit general medical facility in SF. Also performing are Linda Tillery and her band and Deirdre McCalla, and sex educator and author JoAnn Loulan is MC. Art Agnos and Harry Britt also may show up. 7:30 pm, Great American Music Hall, 859 O'Farrell, SF. $16. 885-0750.

Oliver North What are you doing to celebrate Flag Day? How about going and listening to a prepared speech by Oliver North, and then perhaps asking him a few questions? Too good to be true? His topics are "Commitment, Trust and Family," "America's Social Values" and "Conservative Issues." We can joke about this all we want, but the truth is that the place will probably be packed, and his smooth talking will only raise his heroic stature among your average conservative-Americans. Another notch. God bless this stinking shithole. 11 am, Circle Star Center, 1717 Industrial Way, San Carlos. $17.50. 366-7100.

Peter Case See Tues/13.
'Seven Deadly Sisters' See Fri/9.

15/Thursday

Larry Fink Photographer, teacher and author Fink is best known for his book Social Graces, in which he juxtaposes the social works of the urban upper class and the rural working class. 8 pm, SF Cameraclub, 70 12th St., SF. $3-$5. 621-1001. (Fink also gives a mini-workshop Sat/17. Call for reservations.)

'Women Who Wait' ATA's weekly Hot Box video series screens this documentary by Mark Brice and Toni Hafter which looks at the Mexican villages and families left behind when the men seek work in the U.S. in Spanish with English subtitles. 8:30 pm, Artists Television Access, 992 Valencia, SF. $3. 824-3890.

The Films of Marie Menken Bay Area filmmaker Barbara Hammer gives a lecture on and screens several films by Menken, one of the first American filmmakers to explore film as a medium for personal expression. She began making films in the 1940s, making her a contemporary of better-known filmmaker Maya Deren, but her work is hardly known outside academic film circles. 8 pm, SF Art Institute, 800 Chestnut, SF. $4. 558-8129.

Jewish Music Festival See Sun/11.
'Seven Deadly Sisters' See Fri/9.

16/Friday

Bluegrass Festival The California Bluegrass Association presents its 14th annual Father's Day Weekend Bluegrass Festival, running June 16th-18th. Performers this year include the Acme String Ensemble, Bluegrass One, Bluesteins, Brushy Peak, the Fog City Ramblers, Heartland, Laurie Lewis & Grant Street, Snakes in the Grass and the Muleshu Cloggers. Begins today at 4:30 pm, and runs all day through the weekend. Nevada County Fairgrounds, Grass Valley, in the Sierra Foothills just north of I-80. $18-$38 three-day ticket includes camping; $12-$16 single-day tickets. 762-BASS.

ROVA Performance See Tues/13.

CRITIC'S CHOICE/Dance

Frankfurt Ballet

Two of choreographer William Forsythe's strongly articulated works have been presented by the San Francisco Ballet, but this weekend Forsythe is bringing his whole company, the Frankfurt Ballet — made up of more than 50 percent American dancers — to the Bay Area. The performance will give us a closer look at his ideas of ballet: funky, innovative, daring and spectacular, say some; repetitive, cerebral and aggressive, say others. One thing is sure. Forsythe's anarchic synthesis of music, dance, text and lights has brought the world of high-tech to ballet.

Movies

First Runs

A selective listing of first-run movies and complete listings of repertory-house films in the central Bay Area. Since programs are subject to last-minute revisions, call theaters to verify times and titles. Capsule reviews by Zena Jones, unless otherwise noted.

■ The Accidental Tourist Withdrawn William Hurt is torn between garrulous Geena Davis and cool Kathleen Turner in Lawrence Kasdan's mostly-drama that works best in its moments of humor. (Steve Warren) East Bay: Rialto (Gilman near 7th St., Berk. 526-6669); daily at 7 and 9:30 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 1:30 and 4.

■ The Adventures of Baron Munchausen Terry Gilliam's saga of said baron, marvelously played by John Neville, whose near-genius special effects tend to overwhelm. On the few occasions the film establishes audience rapport, it's magical, but otherwise, Baron's a bit emotionally barren. San Francisco: Kabuki 8 (Post at Fillmore. 931-9800); call for times. East Bay: UA (2274 Shattuck, Berk. 843-1487); daily at noon, 2:30, 5, 7:35 and 10:10. Emery Bay (6330 Christie, Emeryville. 420-0107); call for times.

■ Beaches Fans of Bette Midler and Barbara Hershey won't be disappointed in their performances, but the step-by-step downward continuation of comedy and tragedy about their lives and loves that never quite mixes and ends up being merely maudlin. East Bay: Rialto (Gilman near 7th St., Berk. 526-6669); daily at 6:45 and 9:15 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 1:45 and 4:15.

■ Beetlejuice San Francisco: Balboa (38th Ave. and Balboa. 221-8184); call for times.

■ Chocolat Set in Cameroon, the film skillfully suggests a constant unease as lovely Guilla Bosch's bored by her district officer husband Francois Clozet's frequent absences, and what transpires is observed by her small daughter, but so many scenes are cut short or merely suggested that one's left wanting more. San Francisco: Clay (2261 Filmore at Clay. 346-1123); daily at 3, 5:20, 7:40 and 10. East Bay: ACT (2128 Center at Shattuck, Berk. 648-7200); call for times.

■ Cousins East Bay: Rialto (Gilman near 7th St., Berk. 526-6669); daily at 7 and 9:30 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 2:15 and 4:45.

■ Criminal Law Attorney Gary Oldman knows client Kevin Bacon is guilty and tries to double-cross him. The details of this law-vs.-justice thriller don't hold up, but you won't hear them anyway if you see it with a typically talkative audience. (Steve Warren) East Bay: Albany (1115 Solano, Albany. 524-5856); call for times.

■ Dangerous Liaisons Story of seduction for its own sake conducted by cunning virtuoso John Malkovich and cruel Glenn Close until Malkovich runs afoul of innocent Michelle Pfeiffer, that loses a little in translation and strange accents, but is well worth watching. San Francisco: Metro (Union and Webster. 931-1685); daily at noon, 2:30, 5, 7:30 and 10. Stonestown (19th Ave. and Winston. 221-8182); call for times. East Bay: Shattuck Cinema (2230 Shattuck, Berk. 644-3370); daily at 1:40, 4:20, 7:05 and 9:30.

■ Dead Calm San Francisco: Parkside (18th Ave. and Taraval. 661-1940); call for times. Coliseum (9th Ave., at Clement. 221-8181); daily at 8 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 12:15 and 4:10.

■ Dead Poet's Society It's Lean on Me Stand and Deliver for white people as Robin Williams plays a prep school teacher who inspires his boys then fades away to let them work out their problems. Williams is the only unpredictable element in Peter Weir's formula film which is excellent until melodrama makes the final portion deadly. (Steve Warren) San Francisco: Royal (1529 Polk at California. 474-0353); daily at 2, 4:50, 7:40 and 10:30. East Bay: Shattuck Cinema (2230 Shattuck, Berk. 644-3370); call for times. Grand Lake (3200 Grand, Oakl. 452-3556); daily at 7 and 9:40 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 1 and 4.

■ Disorganized Crime East Bay: Parkway Membership Theatre (1834 Park at E. 18th Ave., Oakl. 835-3535); daily at 8:05 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 12:25 and 4:15. South Shore Cinema (2245 Shoreline, Alameda. 521-4200); daily at 5:20 and 9:05 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 1:15.

■ Earth Girls Are Easy Colorful, music-filled but repetitive comedy in which three furry aliens crash into Geena Davis' San Fernando Valley pool, one of whom turns into Jeff Goldblum, which is handy since Davis is alienated from her philandering fiancé, but after the first hour the movie's just more of the same and palls. San Francisco: Regency III (420 Mason at Geary, 387-8414); daily at 1:30, 3:40, 5:50, 8 and 10:10. East Bay: Grand Lake (3200 Grand, Oakl. 452-3556); daily at 6, 8:10 and 10:15 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 1:10 and 3:30. California (Kittredge at Shattuck, Berk. 848-0620); daily at 12:05, 4:10 and 8:15.

■ A Few Days With Me The first half of the film's fascinating, as seemingly slow French supermarket heir Daniel Auteuil tries to find out why the family fortunes are fading, and en route finds mistress Sandrine Bonnaire, but then the film also takes a new, much less interesting route that even Auteuil can't save. San Francisco: Kabuki 8 (Post at Fillmore, 931-9800); call for times.

■ Field of Dreams Near-perfect feel-good movie in which Iowa farmer Kevin Costner builds a baseball diamond in his cornfield, staunchly supported by wondrous wife Amy Madigan, for the ghosts of players past, and has a field day with dreams-come-true fantasy. San Francisco: Kabuki 8 (Post at Fillmore, 931-9800); call for times. East Bay: Grand Lake (3200 Grand, Oakl. 452-3556); daily at 6:10, 8:20 and 10:30 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 1:20 and 3:40. Shattuck Cinemas (2230 Shattuck, Berk. 644-3370); call for times.

■ Fistfighting San Francisco: Alexandria (5400 Geary at 18th Ave. 752-5100); daily at 12:45, 2:45, 4:45, 6:30, 8:30 and 10:30. East Bay: Emery Bay (6330 Christie, Emeryville, 420-0107); daily at 1:45, 4, 6, 8:15 and 10:30. UA (2274 Shattuck, Berk. 843-1487); daily at 1:45, 4, 6, 8:10 and 10:20. South Shore Cinemas (2245 Shoreline, Alameda. 521-4200); daily at 7:15 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 3:15.

■ Getting It Right Everything's right in this delightfully mad movie about 31-year-old virgin Jesse Birdsall who gets involved with rich Lynn Redgrave, very odd Helena Bonham Carter and co-worker/unwed mother Jane Horrocks, and finally becomes a changed man via seduction. San Francisco: Opera Plaza (Van Ness and Golden Gate, 771-0102); daily at 7:15 and 9:15 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 1:15, 3:15 and 5:15. East Bay: Northside (1828 Euclid, Berk. 841-6000); daily at 7:15 and 9:25 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 1:45 and 4:15.

■ Heat & Sunlight San Francisco: Balboa (38th Ave. and Balboa, 221-8184); call for times.

■ Heathers This is a bizarre variation on teen movies that you'll either love or hate, as it takes on teen suicide and, by deftly blurring

the line between reality and fantasy, makes it a shockingly funny satire on the media's exploitation of the subject in which Winona Ryder's excellent. San Francisco: Gateway (Jackson at Battery, 421-3353); daily at 7:30 and 9:50 with matinees Sat.-Mon. and Wed. at 12:30, 2:50 and 5:10. East Bay: Shattuck Cinemas (2230 Shattuck, Berk. 644-3370); daily at 1:10, 3:20, 5:30, 7:40 and 9:50. Grand Lake (3200 Grand, Oakl. 452-3556); daily at 6, 8:15 and 10:30 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 1:15 and 3:45.

■ High Hopes San Francisco: Opera Plaza (Van Ness and Golden Gate, 771-0102); daily at 7:20 and 9:30 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 12:50, 3 and 5:10. (Tues/13 at 9:30 only.)

■ How to Get Ahead in Advertising Actually, you get two heads, as advertising whiz Richard E. Grant builds a creative block against boils to the extent that one grows — and grows — on his neck in this wickedly inventive, biting satire on TV advertising and greed. San Francisco: Vogue (Sacramento and Presidio, 221-8183); daily at noon, 2, 4, 6, 8 and 10. East Bay: Fine Arts (2451 Shattuck at Haste, Berk. 848-2038); daily at 7 and 9 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 1, 3 and 5.

■ Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade This time Harrison Ford's looking for the Holy Grail, but despite the everthing-but-the-kitchen-sink approach, the film doesn't really come to life till the second half, and even then is sometimes repetitive, and even manages to diminish Sean Connery. San Francisco: Regency I (1320 Van Ness at Sutter, 885-6773); daily at 10:30 am, 1:20, 4:10, 7:10 and 10:10. Regency II (1268 Sutter at Van Ness, 776-8054); daily at 11:10 am, 2, 4:50, 7:50 and 10:40. East Bay: Berkeley (2425 Shattuck at Haste, Berk. 848-4300); daily at 1:30, 4:15, 7:15 and 9:55. Piedmont (4186 Piedmont at 41st St., Oakl. 654-2727); call for times. Century (8201 Oakport, Oakl. 562-9990); call for times.

■ K-9 James Belushi is the standard unorthodox, wisecracking cop who's given a dog for a partner in an action comedy for dog lovers that seems overly familiar but is easy to take because it's better executed than most of its kind. Just don't ask for an original moment. (Steve Warren) San Francisco: Kabuki 8 (Post at Fillmore, 931-9800); call for times. East Bay: UA (2274 Shattuck, Berk. 843-1487); daily at 1:30, 5:25 and 9:25. Emery Bay (6330 Christie, Emeryville, 420-0107); call for times. Rockridge Showcase (5144 Broadway at 51st St., Oakl. 658-2285); daily at 7:10 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 3:05.

■ La Lectrice What a treat! A movie about reading, and with the marvelous Miou-Miou yet, as she becomes the heroine of the book she's reading and has a diverting series of adventures in this multilayered puzzle of a picture that delights on all levels. San Francisco: Bridge (3010 Geary at Blake, 751-3212); daily at 7:30 and 9:40 with matinees Sat.-Sun. and Wed. at 1, 3:10 and 5:20. East Bay: ACT (2128 Center at Shattuck, Berk. 548-7200); call for times.

■ Lawrence of Arabia David Lean's 1962 multi-Academy Awarded epic's been returned to its original 222-minute length, reconstructed and restored, its color and sound even better than before, as Peter O'Toole almost becomes an Arab god, ably abetted by the likes of Alec Guinness, Jack Hawkins and Omar Sharif, in a movie that's a true movie-lover's treat. San Francisco: Northpoint (Powell at Bay, 989-6060); daily at 7:30 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 1:30. East Bay: Emery Bay (6330 Christie, Emeryville, 420-0107); daily at 1:30 and 7:30.

■ Lean on Me Though based on the true story of New Jersey principal Joe Clark (played by Morgan Freeman), John G. Avildsen's film is essentially a carbon copy of Stand and Deliver, with blacks instead of Hispanics. The music is its best feature. (Steve Warren) East Bay: Rialto (Gilman near 7th St., Berk. 526-6669); call for times. Parkway Membership Theatre (1834 Park at E. 18th Ave., Oakl. 835-3535); daily at 7:35 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 3:30.

■ Little Vera Despite its Russian "first," an explicit nude love scene, what you'll remember most about this movie is its mood of endless despair, as willful working-class teenager Natalya Negoda has her lover move into her family's cramped quarters with disastrous results, about which apparently nothing can be done. San Francisco: Lumiere (1572 California at Polk, 885-3200); daily at 1, 3:20, 5:40, 8 and 10:30. East Bay: Northside (1828 Euclid, Berk. 841-6000); daily at 7 and 9:20 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 1:30 and 4.

■ Major League Major entertainment all the way as Tom Berenger and Charlie Sheen are among the reluctant players new Cleveland Indians team owner Margaret Whitton hires to lose because she wants to move the club to Miami, but this bargain-basement team really knows how to turn the situation into an out-of-the-ballpark home run. San Francisco: Alexandria (5400 Geary at 18th Ave. 752-5100); daily at 1, 3:15, 5:30, 7:45 and 10. East Bay: Shattuck Cinemas (2230 Shattuck, Berk. 644-3370); daily at 12:45, 3, 5:15, 7:30 and 9:45. Parkway Membership Theatre (1834 Park at E. 18th Ave., Oakl. 835-3535); daily at 6:10 and 10 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 2:20. South Shore Cinemas (2245 Shoreline, Alameda, 521-4200); daily at 7 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 3.

■ Miracle Mile San Francisco: Galaxy (1285 Sutter at Van Ness, 474-8700); daily at 6:15, 8:15 and 10:15 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 12:15, 2:15 and 4:15. East Bay: Emery Bay (6330 Christie, Emeryville, 420-0107); daily at 1:15, 3:30, 5:45, 8 and 10:15.

■ Miss Firecracker Low-keyed character study of Southern Mississippian Holly Hunter trying to regain her lost morality by becoming Miss Firecracker, in which she's not helped by her beautiful cousin Mary Steenburgen or insane cousin Tim Robbins, but it all comes out right in the well-acted end. San Francisco: Galaxy (1285 Sutter at Van Ness, 474-8700); daily at 6:10, 8:20 and 10:30 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 1:40 am, 1:50 and 4. East Bay: Emery Bay (6330 Christie, Emeryville, 420-0107); call for times. UA (2274 Shattuck, Berk. 843-1487); daily at 3:25 and 7:25.

■ Mississippi Burning Controversial story of inapplicable bigotry in 1964 Mississippi when feuding FBI agents Gene Hackman and Willem Dafoe are sent to investigate the disappearance of three civil rights workers, that's over-Rambunctious and not always accurate, but Hackman's spellbinding. East Bay: Emery Bay (6330 Christie, Emeryville, 420-0107); call for times.

■ Murmur of the Heart Louis Malle's 1971 classic, tender and comic treatment of a young boy's coming of age that resurrects the heart, as Benoit Ferreux's the 14-year-old and Lea Massari's his forever-young mother in a movie that treats incest with a discretion that's sublime. San Francisco: Lumiere (1572 California at Polk, 885-3200); daily at 1:05, 3:30, 5:55, 8:10 and 10:20.

■ The Naked Gun East Bay: South Shore Cinemas (2245 Shoreline, Alameda, 521-4200); daily at 5:10 and 9 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 1:15.

■ The Navigator The beautifully photographed story starts in 1348 Cambodia with villagers hiding underground from the Black Plague, with young visionary Hamish McFarlane traveling through a tunnel and time to 1988 New Zealand to save them, that's a stunning study in contrasts, but not entirely easy to appreciate. San Francisco: Four Star (2200 Clement at 23rd Ave. 752-2650); call for times. East Bay: Albany (1115 Solano, Albany, 524-5656); call for times.

■ New York Stories Three mini-films

 155. Are you less talkative than your associates?
 156. Are you definite and emphatic in voice and manner?
 157. Do you place too high an importance on your own interests and fields of knowledge in comparison to others?
 158. Do you suspect someone does not like you and criticizes you to others?
 159. Would you assist a fellow traveler rather than leave it to the officials?
 160. Are you cordial only to close friends, if at all?
 161. Do you quickly return to normal rather than being disturbed for a while after seeing a tragic movie or play?
 162. Does some inferiority make you feel sad?
 163. Is it easy for you to relax?
 164. When you "really want to do something," do you feel your desires are paramount to all opposition?
 165. Do you attempt to "start things in your area"?
 166. Do you feel strongly convinced of the correctness of your opinions when in a controversy, excluding those subjects about which you are an expert?
 167. Do you find it annoying to have any criticism made of you, even though it is justified and from which you could profit?
 168. Having settled an argument, do you continue to feel disgruntled for a while?
 169. Would you stand by and fail to protect some animal from needless suffering?
 170. Do you give a kiss, hug, pat on the back or otherwise manifest pleasure in meeting friends you haven't seen for some time, rather than just being polite?

■ Pet Sematary Watered-down version of Stephen King's '83 best-seller in which Dr. Dale Midkiff and his family move into an isolated house near a pet cemetery, with disastrous results, the horror of which is considerably negated by too much deadpan humor. San Francisco: Coliseum (Ninth Ave. at Clement, 221-8181): daily at 11 and 9:50 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 2:10. Parkside (19th Ave. and Taraval, 661-1940): call for times. East Bay: California (Kittredge at Shattuck, Berk. 848-0620): call for times. Century (8201 Oakpark, Oakl. 562-9990): daily at 1:40, 5:50 and 10:05.

■ Pink Cadillac Skip tracer Clint Eastwood's on innocent Bernadette Peters' trail because her white supremacist husband let her take the rap for his $250,000 in counterfeit cash, but the too-real nastiness doesn't mix with the comedy, Peters out-acts Eastwood, and Pink Cadillac ends up an Edsel. San Francisco: Stonestown (19th Ave. and Winston, 221-8182): daily at 12:15, 2:30, 5, 7:30 and 9:45. Galaxy (1285 Sutter at Van Ness, 474-8700): daily at 8 and 10:30 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 12:30, 3 and 5:30. East Bay: Rockridge Showcase West (293 Whitmore, near 45th St. and Broadway, Oakl. 658-2285): Mon.-Fri. at 5, 7:15 and 9:35 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 1:45, 4:15, 6:45 and 9:20. Emery Bay (6330 Christie, Emeryville, 420-0107): daily at noon, 2:30, 5, 7:45 and 10:30. UA (2274 Shattuck, Berk. 843-1487): daily at 12:15, 2:50, 5:30, 8 and 10:30. Century (8201 Oakpark, Oakl. 562-9990): daily at 2:50 and 7:10.

■ Rain Man Dustin Hoffman's superlative again as an autistic savant whom brash younger brother Tom Cruise kidnaps and takes on a cross-country trip hoping to get half his inheritance, and although the trip's too long-drawn-out, the performances are excellent. San Francisco: Cinema 21 (2141 Chestnut at Steiner, 921-6720): daily at 7 and 9:45 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 1 and 4. East Bay: Oaks (1875 Solano, Berk. 526-1836): daily at 7 and 9:20 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 2 and 4:30.

■ Renegade Maverick cop Kleiser Sutherland and Lakota Indian Lou Diamond Phillips outgun police and other thugs by bringing bad guys to justice in a preposterous but moderately entertaining collection of urban and western cliches that would be better if it didn't take itself so seriously. (Steve Warren) San Francisco: Kabuki 8 (Post at Fillmore, 931-9800): call for times. East Bay: UA (2274 Shattuck, Berk. 843-1487): daily at 1:30, 3:45, 6, 8:15 and 10:30. Emery Bay (6330 Christie, Emeryville, 420-0107): daily at 1, 3:15, 5:30, 8 and 10:30. Rockridge Showcase West (293 Whitmore, near 45th St. and Broadway, Oakl. 658-2285): daily at 5:15, 7:15 and 9:15 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 1:15 and 3:15. Century (8201 Oakpark, Oakl. 562-9990): daily at 1:05, 3:15, 5:30, 7:40 and 9:50.

■ Road House If you love violence, you'll adore bouncer Patrick Swayze's efforts to tame the bestial habits of the Double Deuce road house, and oust local kingpin Ben Gazzara. If you don't, you won't. San Francisco: Presidio (Chestnut near Scott, 922-1318): daily at 5:10, 7:45 and 10:20 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 12:10 and 2:40. East Bay: California (Kittredge at Shattuck, Berk. 848-0620): daily at 11:50 am, 3:55 and 8. Rockridge Showcase (5144 Broadway at 51st St., Oakl. 658-2285): daily at 5:05 and 9:10 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 1. Century (8201 Oakpark, Oakl. 562-9990): daily at 3:40 and 7:50.

■ Say Anything Little gem of a movie in which apparently ordinary 19-year-old John Cusack falls for beautiful, brilliant student lone Skye, and what happens when Skye's emotional life falls apart, that's so naturally written, directed and acted, so far removed from TV sitcom level, that the audience can't say anything much, but burst into applause. San Francisco: Alexandria (5400 Geary at 18th Ave. 752-5100): daily at 1:15, 5:30 and 9:40. East Bay: California (Kittredge at Shattuck, Berk. 848-0620): daily at 2, 6:05 and 10:05.

■ Scandal Sumptuous story of the early '60s government-toppling scandal involving British War Minister John Profumo and 17-year-old Christine Keeler, with exquisitely honed performances, particularly John Hurt playing Pygmalion to Joanne Whalley-Kilmer the Keeler. San Francisco: Kabuki 8 (Post at Fillmore, 931-9800): call for times. East Bay: Oaks (1875 Solano, Berk. 526-1836): call for times.

■ See No Evil, Hear No Evil Blind Richard Pryor and deaf Gene Wilder are unlikely murder suspects who get involved in industrial espionage in this lightweight but very enjoyable comedic caper, despite a tad too many "I—words. San Francisco: Coronet (3575 Geary at Arguello, 752-4400): daily at 12:45, 3, 5:15, 7:45 and 10. East Bay: Rockridge Showcase West (293 Whitmore, near 45th St. and Broadway, Oakl. 658-2285): daily at 5:30, 7:30 and 9:30 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 1:30 and 3:30. Emery Bay (6330 Christie, Emeryville, 420-0107): daily at 12:40, 3, 5:30, 8 and 10:30. UA (2274 Shattuck, Berk. 843-1487): call for times. Century (8201 Oakpark, Oakl. 562-9990): daily at 12:25, 2:45, 5, 7:25 and 9:35.

■ Star Trek: The Final Frontier San Francisco: Alhambra (Polk and Green, 979-8899): daily at 12:30, 3, 5:30, 8 and 10:30. Empire (85 West Portal at Vicente, 661-2539): daily at 11:30 am, 12:30, 2, 3, 4:30, 5:30, 7, 8, 9:30 and 10:30. East Bay: Century (8201 Oakpark, Oakl. 562-9990): daily at 12:10, 2:30, 5:05, 7:30 and 10. California (Kittredge at Shattuck, Berk. 848-0620): daily at noon, 2:20, 4:40, 7:15 and 9:45. Piedmont (4186 Piedmont at 41st St., Oakl. 654-2727): daily at noon, 2:20, 4:40, 7:30 and 10:10.

CRITIC'S CHOICE/Movies

Tras el Cristal (In a Glass Cage)

This brilliant Spanish drama, the first feature by Augustin Villaronga, made our Ten Best list last year but was seen by disappointingly few in one of its rare commercial engagements. Perhaps I could entice you by saying it's an upbeat comedy with car chases, but the fact is it's an unpleasantly harrowing drama with suspenseful moments that expand on, rather than copying, Hitchcock's style.

Set after World War II, it's about a young man who tracks down his Nazi torturer — not for revenge, but to become his disciple. The only pleasure you can derive from it is cinematic, the joy of being introduced to a new director with a bright future. (His second film, The Moonchild, was just shown in competition at Cannes.) He may upset you, but it's worth the risk.

■ Tras el Cristal (In a Glass Cage), 12:35, 4:45 and 8:55 pm, Wed/14/Fri/16, Strand Theater, 1127 Market, SF. $2.50-$3.50, 621-2227.

■ Vampire's Kiss Nicolas Cage is so awful as a literary agent (!) being turned into a vampire by Jennifer Beals, it's hard to tell whether the comedy's intentional or just naturally terrible, but either way, you'll laugh at it rather than with it. San Francisco: Galaxy (1285 Sutter at Van Ness, 474-8700): daily at 6:30, 8:35 and 10:30 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 11:50 am, 2 and 4:15.

■ Vincent: The Life and Times of Vincent Van Gogh San Francisco: Balboa (38th Ave. and Balboa, 221-8184): call for times.

■ Warm Nights on a Slow Moving Train The chameleon-like Wendy Hughes gives a superb performance as a prostitute who's different things to different men every weekend to support her crippled brother, and if she's even better than this not-quite-perfect film, who's to quibble? San Francisco: Kabuki 8 (Post at Fillmore, 931-9800): call for times. East Bay: Shattuck Cinemas (2230 Shattuck, Berk. 644-3370): call for times.

■ A Winter Tan This is supposed to be Jackie Burroughs' "vacation from feminism," a quest for love, sex and freedom in Mexico, but between the five directors it's reduced to banal terms that only skim the surface of the intent. San Francisco: Lumiere (1572 California at Polk, 885-5200): daily at 2, 4, 6:05, 8:15 and 10:15.

■ Women on the Verge of a Nervous Breakdown One of a kind brilliant bit of Spanish fatalism about women learning to get over the grief caused by men, in which Carmen Maura's magnificent, aided by a pitcher of spiked gazpacho, if you catch my drift. San Francisco: Opera Plaza (Van Ness and Golden Gate, 771-0102): daily at 7:20 and 9:20 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 1:15, 3:15 and 5:20. East Bay: Shattuck Cinemas (2230 Shattuck, Berk. 644-3370): daily at 12:50, 3, 4:55, 6:55 and 9.

■ Working Girl Frothy comedy in which street-smart, ambitious brokerage employee Melanie Griffith leaves the steno pool for a loftier level, not aided by piranha-souled superwoman Sigourney, that proves that a working girl can become a yuppie too. San Francisco: Alexandria (5400 Geary at 18th Ave. 752-5100): daily at 3:15 and 7:30. Cannery (2801 Leavenworth at Beach, 441-5560): call for times. East Bay: Emery Bay (6330 Christie, Emeryville, 420-0107): call for times.

—Vincent Canby, THE NEW YORK TIMES

"Vigorous, cheerfully outrageous satire. Provocative - good fun."
—Peter Travers, ROLLING STONE

"Savagely funny, off-beat comedy."

CRITIC'S CHOICE/Music

June Tabor

Know-nothing U.S. immigration officials delayed English singer June Tabor's visa on the specious grounds of undistinguished artistic merit. All Tabor has done in the past year is record two of the most compelling vocal albums on either side of the Atlantic — the dazzling No More to the Dance (Shanachie), her second historic Silly Sisters collaboration with Steeleye Span singer Maddy Prior, and the exquisite Aqaba (Shanachie), her first solo work in more than five years. Applied to traditional folk songs, new compositions or jazz standards, Tabor's pure, unadorned singing style begs only the sparsest accompaniment (if any at all) — just a keyboard here, a guitar there, a second voice or a glancing fiddle. On her current tour she is supported on piano and synthesizer by Huw Warren, and the Bay Area's own Carnahan & Petrie open with their progressive, cross-genre extrapolations of Celtic and American traditions.

Opening

■ Christopher Durang One-Acts

The Island Players present Sister Mary Ignatius Explains it all for You and Actor's Nightmare by playwright Durang. Opens Fri/9. Plays Fri.-Sat. at 9 pm. Through July 29. Island Playhouse, 900 Santa Clara, Alameda. $5-$8. 521-6965.

■ The Mysterious Stranger The Underworld Opera Company (Dick Dines Out) presents an operatic version of a piece of Mark Twain fiction lambasting powerful religion. Opens Fri/9. Plays Wed.-Sat. at 8 pm and Sun. at 2 pm. Through June 18. Julia Morgan Theatre, 2640 College, Berk. $10-$12. 465-0792.

■ A Fairy Tale Odyssey A one-woman play for children created and performed by Matilda Kunin. Opens Sat/10. Plays Sat. at 1 and 3:30 pm and Sun. at 1 pm. Through July 2. Young Performers Theatre, Building C, Fort Mason Center, Buchanan at Marina, SF. $4-$6. 346-5550.

■ Dry Land Divine Rinde Eckert presents an expanded version of his performance piece about water diver John Fletcher. Opens Wed/14. Plays Wed.-Sat. at 8 pm. Through July 1. Intersection for the Arts, 766 Valencia, SF. $8-$10; $15 opening and reception. 626-3311.

■ The Poets' Corner Harry Kondoleon wrote this play concerning four writers struggling with success, or the lack of it, in the literary world. Opens Wed/14. Plays Wed.-Sat. at 8:30 pm and Sun. at 2 pm. Through June 25. Magic Theatre, Fort Mason Center, Building D, Marina and Buchanan, SF. $12-$15. 441-8822.

■ Soul Survivor An "AIDS comedy," written by Anthony Bruno and directed by Kenneth R. Dixon. Plays Wed.-Sat. at 8 pm, with selected Sun. matinees. Through June 24. Theatre Rhinoceros, 2926 16th St., SF. $10-$13. 661-5079.

■ Andorra The Pacific Jewish Theatre presents Max Frisch's Andorra. Plays Fri.-Sun. at 8 pm with a matinee Sun. at 3 pm. Through June 25. Pacific Jewish Theatre, Spice Box Cultural Center, 820 Heinz at 20th St., Berk. $10-$15. 849-0550.

■ Brigadoon This year's Mountain Play, a 76-year-old tradition, is Brigadoon, and it comes complete with the Prince Charles Pipe Band. Plays Sun. at 1:30 pm. Through June 25. Mt. Tamalpais Mountain Theater, on top of Mt. Tamalpais, Marin County. Hiking is the traditional way to get there, but there's also a free shuttle bus service leaving at 10 am from two locations: Tamalpais High School, Camino Alto and Miller, Mill Valley; and the Manzanita parking lot, near the Mill Valley/Stinson Beach exit from Hwy. 101. $7-$12. 383-1100.

■ The Broken Jug German playwright Heinrich von Kleist wrote this comedy in the early 1800s. Plays Wed.-Sat. at 8:30 pm and Sun. at 2 and 7:30 pm. Through June 25. Marin Theatre Company, 397 Miller, Mill Valley. 388-5208.

■ Model Home The Bay Area theater troupe lesser mortals presents this intimate tour, from bliss to nightmare, through the American Dream. Plays Thurs.-Sun. at 11 pm. Through June 25. Climate Theatre, 252 Ninth St., SF. $8-$10. 626-9196.

■ Showdown With Charles Manson A new play by Richard Rubacher, directed by Steve Hill. Plays Fri.-Sat. at 7:30 pm and Sun. at 3:30 pm. Through June 25. BMT Theater, 3629 San Pablo, Emeryville. $8-$12. 654-6172.

■ Help Wanted The Z Collective, a multidisciplinary artists' collaborative, performs Help Wanted, a collage of short scenes examining everyday Americans who have fallen through the "safety net." Plays Sat.-Sun. at 3 pm and Mon. at 8:30 pm. Through June 26. SF Dance Theater, 60 Brady, SF. $8, but no one turned away. 863-4793.

■ Ceremonies in Dark Old Men Lonnie Elder III wrote this story of a ghetto family that aspires to better things but goes about it in the wrong way. It's performed by the Black Repertory Group. Plays Thurs.-Sat. at 8 pm with matinees Sat. at 2:30 pm. Through July 1. 3201 Adeline, Berk. $9. 652-2120.

■ Mondo Mambo A multimedia "adult" puppet extravaganza starring Cintra Wilson, conceived and directed by Joegh Bullock. Plays Thurs.-Sat. at 10:30 pm. Through July 1. Climate Theatre, 252 Ninth St., SF. $8. 626-9196.

■ Noises Off May the farce be with you. In this boisterous hit comedy, Michael Frayn spoofs actors at their most childish, and celebrates them at their most gallantly daredevil. Frayn's intricate romp follows a tacky British acting company from kissy-poo dress rehearsal to backstage mid-run warfare to end-of-tour shambles. As the camaraderie goes sour, the slapstick stunts get more murderous and hilarious. This top-notch moved-up production boasts almost exactly the same cast seen in its first stand at the Marin Theatre Company — and a fine cast it is, too. Richard Seyd again provides the nimble direction and traffic management. (Misha Berson) Plays Tues.-Sat. at 8 pm with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 2 pm and a Sun. show at 7 pm. Extended through July 2. Marines Memorial Theatre, Sutter at Mason, SF. $16-$22. 771-6900.

■ Frankie and Johnny in the Claire de Lune A play by Terrence McNally, directed by Albert Takazuckas. Plays

Wed.-Sat. at 8:30 pm and Sun. at 2 and 7:30 pm. Through July 9. Magic Theatre, Fort Mason Center, Building D, Marina and Buchanan, SF. $10-$20. 441-8822.

■ Serious Money Caryl Churchill's portrayal of London's post-Big Bang financial scene. Plays Tues.-Sat. at 8 pm and Sun. at 2 and 7 pm, with selected Thurs. and Sat. matinees. Through July 16. Berkeley Repertory Theatre, 2025 Addison, Berk. $17-$23. 845-4700.

■ Oliver The Masquers present this musical based on Charles Dickens' Oliver Twist. Plays Fri.-Sat. at 8:30 pm, with selected Sun. matinees. Through July 22. Masquers Playhouse, 105 Park Place, Pt. Richmond. $7. 232-4031.

■ Bar None A comedy-mystery that starts off like the senior play at Harvey Milk High School turns into a laugh riot when the audience gets into the investigation in the second act. It ain't Art, despite some artful performances, but the long-running hit's a crowd-pleaser. (Steve Warren) Plays Thurs.-Fri. at 8 pm, Sat. at 7 and 9:30 pm and Sun. at 2 pm. Open-ended. Zephyr Theatre, 25 Van Ness, SF. $16-$17. 861-6895.

■ Greater Tuna This compassionate satire of small-town Texas life barbecues bigots without robbing them of their humanity. Plays Mon., Thurs. and Fri. at 8 pm; Sat. at 8 and 9 pm; and Sun. at 3 and 7 pm. Open-ended. Cable Car Theatre, 430 Mason, SF. $15-$19. 771-6900.

■ Closing

■ Hamlet The Subterranean Shakespeare Company presents an unabridged version of the most famous of Shakespeare's plays, directed by Stanley S. Spenger. Plays Fri.-Sat. at 8 pm. Through June 10. La Val's Northside Subterranean Cabaret, 1834 Euclid, Berk. $4-$7. 550-7743.

■ Talking With . . . The Potrero Hill Theatre Ensemble presents these tales by women about enthusiasms that become obsessions. Plays Fri.-Sat. at 8 pm. Through June 10. Potrero Hill Neighborhood House, 953 De Haro, SF. $6. 839-9271.

■ James and the Giant Peach The Alameda Children's Musical Theatre presents this non-musical play based on Roald Dahl's children's story. Plays Sat. at 7:30 pm and Sun. at 1 and 3 pm. Through June 11. Island Playhouse, 900 Santa Clara, Alameda. $3.50-$6. 521-6965.

■ La Victima El Teatro de la Esperanza's bilingual show (first produced in 1976) tracks the travails of a Mexican immigrant family over three generations. The performance style is classic acto agit-prop, with impassioned skits and musical interludes of rousing corridos (story-songs). As performed by an energetic cast of seven, there's still some political and dramatic zest to the material. But the "bilingual" billing misleads: non-Spanish speakers will follow the plot, but miss out on all the song lyrics and much of the humor. (Misha Berson) Plays Fri.-Sun. at 8 pm. Through June 11. Mission Cultural Center, 2888 Mission, SF. $6.50-$8. 695-1410.

■ Paraguay A comedy/suspense story written by Thomas Poole, playing as part of the Magic Theatre's Springfest. Plays Wed.-Sat. at 8:30 pm and Sun. at 2 pm. Through June 11. Magic Theatre, Fort Mason Center, Building D, Marina and Buchanan, SF. $12-$15. 441-8822.

■ Phantom of the Opera This long-running musical is not the Andrew Lloyd Weber mega-hit, but writer-composer Ken Hill's version of the same ghoul-meets-girl fable. If you appreciate old-fashioned melodrama, operetta-style singing and hammy acting in a format that won't tax your intellect or emotions, this Phantom's for you. (Misha Berson) Plays Tues.-Thurs. at 8 pm; Fri. at 8:30 pm; Sat. at 2 and 8:30 pm; and Sun. at 2 and 7 pm. Most closes June 11. Theatre on the Square, 450 Post, SF. $22-$30. 433-9500.

Short Runs

■ Dee Russell & Scarlet Harlot An evening of performance by these two local artists. Thurs/15 at 8 pm. Above Paradise, 308 11th St. at Folsom, SF. Free. 861-6906.

■ SF Playwrights' Center In its June showcase of Dramarama '89 winners, the center presents a staged reading of Madwoman by Sterling Price-McKinney. Plays Fri/9 at 7:30 pm. Blue Bear Theatre, Building D, room 255, Fort Mason Center, Buchanan at Marina, SF. $2. Tickets at the door.

■ Seven Deadly Sisters The Pleiades Players present this original comic thriller. Plays Fri/9-Sun/11 at 8 pm, with an additional midnight show Sat/10. Studio Eremos, 401 Alabama, SF. $5. 552-3541. Also Wed/14-Thurs/15 at 8 pm, La Pena, 3105 Shattuck, Berk. $5. 849-2572.

■ A Sneeze in Time The Community Music Center's Integrated Curriculum students wrote the book and music for this play. Plays Sat/10 at 11 am. SF Community Music Center, 544 Capp, SF. Free. 462-6015.

■ Training the Virgin Reptilemoontheatre presents its latest production concerning an innocent, her two sisters and a mother, directed by Caitlin Morgan. Plays Fri.-Sat. at 11 pm, through June 17. Intersection for the Arts, 766 Valencia, SF. $4-$5. 282-4135.

■ What Kind of Beamer Am I? A performance in lecture form by Ralph Cordova, addressing the phenomenon of "beaenism." Plays Wed/7-Sat/10 at 8 pm. Intersection for the Arts, 766 Valencia, SF. $8-$10. 626-3311. ■

Unique Opportunity

If you bring creativity, intensity, stimulation and fun, so will I. I like being single but miss passion. I have an excellent support system but seek special companion. I'm 38, 6'4", blue eyes, brown hair and handsome. If you think you never would answer an ad, imagine I thought I would never write one. Guardian Box #3913H.

WOMEN SEEKING WOMEN

Attractive, 37, nonsmoking, nervous novice, finally ready to meet eclectic equal. Pluses if you stop at Lancoome counter at Macy's, Lakeland, or have a motorcycle. GG P.O. Box 210568 S.F., 94121.

Lesbian, 32, white, slender, blonde, wants to meet women who are involved in or interested in the arts, especially theater; actively involved in their own personal growth, and who value and make time for relationships/friendships. I live in the Bay Area, interested in friendship and dating-definitely more if it seems right. Ultimately, I want a committed, monogamous relationship. Interested? I'd love to hear from you. Guardian Box #3524H.

Best of Both Worlds

I am a female who seeks executive husband who has let me enjoy life. I'm blonde, 40's, 5'5", 117, tanned. Looking for special female to share weekends, etc., at my suburban home, nude beaches, etc. No drugs/head-games. You should be 25 plus, single, attractive, together. Can we be friends? Photo: Paula 5424-10 Ste. 123 Pleasanton, CA 94566.

WOMEN SEEKING MEN

Dynamic, shapely, affluent, sharp, professional woman, seeks counterpart gentleman, 40-60, monogamous soulmate. Boxholder 341, Moraga 94566.

Friend/Lover/Companion

Hi, I am an adventurous, nice looking, progressive, well educated woman (psychotherapist and consultant). I am 44, warm and communicative, somewhat independent. I am seeking a healthy, reasonably fit, prosperous man, 40-55, who has spiritual leaning, is stable, loving and giving. Has a sense of humor. Is friendly, loves warm weather and hot tubs. Is adventurous and encourages me to be. I'd like a good friend and likes to communicate. He can cook, knows how to have fun. Together we enjoy the outdoors, city pleasures, travel, ethnic foods, candle light dinners, and ultimately want to marry and a cozy home to come to. P.O. Box 2657, Berkeley 94702.

Lively and affectionate professional female described as direct and striking, looking for intelligence and playfulness in a relationship with a man (40-48, over 5'10"), with similar attributes who is physically and emotionally healthy, happily successful and capable of intimacy. Guardian Box #3447F.

Beautiful, loving gentle woman with compassion and heart desires someone special to share life's pleasures. I am creative, intelligent, 34, am a dancer, antiques, exploring the countryside, intimate conversation and carousels. Seeking a warm, sensitive, successful, patient, loving man 30-45, who can see beyond physical size for a mutually exclusive caring and supportive relationship. Guardian Box #3516F.

Huggable, warm, gentle, pretty female, early 40's. A book lover and good cook. I'm looking for an intelligent man who likes women, is happy with his life, has a sense of humor, calls when he says he will, and is ready for a long term relationship. Guardian Box #3519F.

You Have What I Need

If you enjoy taking charge, I'm 42 and looking for a lover/companion/friend. Openness, sensitivity to nature, therapy and education. I am a Non-smoker. Photo appreciated. Guardian Box #3704H.

Great looking but approachable, kind, funny, mid-thirties lady likes quiet evenings at home and dancing the night away. I seek a kind, communicative black man with a good sense of humor and a warm heart. Guardian Box #3526H.

Rich In Personality

Pretty, bright, educated BF, 39, 5'6", trim and independent, seeks tall, attractive, professional male. My interests include: travel, jazz, cross-country skiing, photography, museums, and eating spicy food. Perhaps we have more in common. Photo please. POB 2322, Hayward, CA 94541.

I Want You!

If you can appreciate a woman who is assertive, intelligent, independent, happy and an attractive, fit single mom. Wait! There's more. I am also emotional, affectionate and extremely supportive. I would like to meet a single or divorced man between 38-48 (or so) who is communicative, educated, physically fit and keeps working at it, a non-smoker, enjoys his life and can assess his feelings or at least wants to. Did I mention that I love to laugh even at myself? Guardian Box 3551H.

Could This Be You?

Sassy, beautiful, single BF, seeks smart, kind, funny man, 42-50, good listener, who likes the arts, museum hopping, travel, talk books, and would rather relax and divert, and if the chemistry is right, involvement. Guardian Box #3612F.

Lab retriever looking for companion for moping master, single, Jewish female, 38, cute, smart, sexy, lots-o'-fun, generous with milkbones, has become a chore, suks, complains of un-met needs, starts into space, sighs a lot. Looking for single male, no slick cats, must like dogs, must think dogs superior life form. 1678 Shattuck Ave #11 Berkeley, 94708.

DV8. Kundera. Carmen (McRae or Mavra). At clones. Workout. Chicago. Cabernet. Lou Reed. Boston. Margaret Atwood. Sushi. Alvin Ailey. Single WF, 33, professional, attractive etc, seeks similar M. What's on your list? Guardian Box #3547F.

Ready For Commitment

Very affectionate female, 40, excellent figure, romantic, caring, sexual, humorous and together. Enjoys indoor, outdoor activities, good conversationalist, would like to meet gentlemen with matching interests, 30-44. No picture, no reply. Guardian Box #3556F.

Seek Brains And Brawn I am 36, Jewish, professional. You are a single, WM, 34-42, tall, healthy, employed and solvent, honest, possess a quick wit, and can do more than change a light bulb. We enjoy cooking together, dining out (ethnic music jazz and oldies 40's and 70's), outdoors, baggagemon, flicks, travel, sailing, animals, hours of conversation, cuddling and kids. We now finally have a place to live. I am interested in monogamous relationship. No New Age bliss types! Please enclose phone number, picture optional. Box #291, 350 7th Avenue, SF, 94118.

Not Into Hypergamy

I would like to meet an untangled man (50 plus) with a quick mind, a generous spirit and a sense of the ridiculous. At midlife I am a high energy lady who is professionally accomplished and secure. I have lots of education, the usual music and theater subscriptions, a nice smile and great eyes. But I am puzzled as to how to meet a man who is my peer. Guardian Box #3515F.

I Don't Do Aerobics

I know that's almost unthinkable these days, but I'd rather go for a walk and enjoy the scenery, and prefer to get in rhythm and blues or go swimming in a tropical paradise. Traveling, going to the symphony, seeing a play or reading a good book are also favored activities. If you're into me, you're into me. I'm a dinner party; there's always lots of good conversation and fabulous food to be savored there. Seeing my home will give you some clues about me - it's warm, cozy and comfortable, and you'll find me to be a very gracious hostess. I have a quick wit and love to laugh, but there's also a part of me that is serious and introspective. I show my feelings readily, and prefer to relate to people who can reciprocate. I'm 36, pretty, blonde, a bit soft around the edges, but shapely. I'd like to meet a man who is interested in a committed relationship and is open to having children. Someone who likes intimacy and passion, likes to be around women who say how they feel, and wants an equal partner. Intelligence, humor and a willingness to work out problems are also important to me. If interested, send letter and photo to Guardian Box #3623F.

Beauty And The Beast

I'll provide the beauty if you provide the beast. 5'2", 125, blonde, blue-eyed. I am creative, intelligent, 34, am a dancer, antiques, exploring the countryside, intimate conversation and carousels. Seeking a warm, sensitive, successful, patient, loving man 30-45, who can see beyond physical size for a mutually exclusive caring and supportive relationship. Guardian Box #3516F.

Jolie De Vivre

Appealing, reheaded, slim, 49, 5'2", high school graduate, intelligent, single, nonsmoking, kind, attractive, fit, 50ish professional with wonderful sense of humor, also seeking friend, companion, and commitment. I enjoy foreign films, travel, and socializing. I am a good conversationalist, music, friends, and you? Guardian Box #3705F.

Snapping Synopsis fill this head

RELATIONSHIPS

Fun But Real

I am a 46-year-old attractive non-Yuppie Jewish male with my own professional business, and I want to meet a woman who, like me, is seeking love, friendship and childlike fun. Ethnic background or profession doesn't matter so long as she is in her late-20s to mid-30s and (like me) is warm, unpretentious, kind, intelligent, has a good sense of humor, this ad not withstanding - and simple tastes (including nature, good friends, conversation, romance, food, books, hearty laughter). I am 5'10", solidly built, and am a bit partial to women who tend toward the full-bodied but not overweight. Photo appreciated if available. Guardian Box #3503H.

Lets Have Fun

Seeking fun, adventurous, attractive, warm, intelligent, non-yuppie, down-to-earth, slightly off-beat woman, with good sense of humor. 24-32, 1m 31, 5'11, WM, reluctant professional. Into skiing, hiking, dancing, film, music, much more. I'd like to meet someone with whom I can relax, and just have fun! Become friends and perhaps more. Guardian Box #3620F.

Athletic Gentlemen

Dark, handsome, slender, WM, 30, 5'8", would like to meet you! Please be uninvolved, educated, sincere, 25-38. Hopefully you enjoy the great outdoors, wine, dining, interesting conversation, caring friendship and sensual passion. Photo appreciated and returned with mine. Guardian Box #3431H.

"Incorrigible" Me

At 30 years, this 5'8" single WM inveterate punster/pediatrician is ready to be committed (to a relationship). Physically a bit of a Teddy Bear, mentally a bit nutty but I like it. A comfortable unobservant Jaw descended from a long line of back rubbers. I've a wide range of interests, from jazz and rock music, through comedy clubs and good friends, to some outdoor times (I've tried sky-diving, and would love to learn to sail). I'm looking for a bright, independent woman interested in kids, and tolerant of my two cats. If you can tolerate my sense of humor, like book shops and trips to Sonoma, we should "do a letter." Come on, it's hard to write better than I do, so give it a try. No drugs, smokers. Guardian Box #3534F.

Healthy, intelligent, considerate, vigorous, slim, mid-40s man seeks compatible woman for weekly romantic rendezvous. Guardian Box #3504F.

German Leo, 40's, heart and compassion, blonde, slim, 6'2", extensively travelled, diverse interests, seeks lean, willowy, exotic, dark-skinned, Mediterranean or foreign female in her late twenties to early forties, with strong humanistic, artistic, spiritual inclinations, to garden, hike, dance, make music, love, and be friends. With ample time for foreign travel to enjoy life, the unconventional, healthy way. Photo appreciated. Box 2007, Ross CA 94057.

June Swoon

25-year-old tall (6'3") dark (Italianate) handsome (aquiline features) native San Francisco yuppie with European flair would like to romance a woman of beauty and spark. I've never placed an ad for this sort of thing and hope it turns out to be jolly good fun. If you enjoy dancing, dining, wining (I Calistoga actually), Sonoma, SOMA, Roma? SF's cultural banquet and don't abhor dressing up then send yourself to me via note and photo. I live close to a cafe for convenient first encounter (of a java nature). Oh yes, I'm quite big on romance letters (not ads). I consider it an art form. I'm musical and great with kids. A plus if you are or speak French. Hope to hear from you then. Cheers. Guardian Box #3710F.

Millionaire commodity trader wants to share his secrets to slender, pretty, single WF, 18-24. Come join me for one hour each day. (6:30 - 1:15) and learn how to be financially independent. Maybe you can teach me how to enjoy life. Guardian Box #3712F.

Take charge woman needed to provide direction to handsome preppy male. I'm caring, sensitive, creative, well settled financially. Seek long term relationship with 30's Miss who likes power and knows how to use it. Be pampered beyond your wildest expectations. Lunch first. Box 541, Corte Madera 94925.

It's the eighties...can you really find the man of your dreams in these ads? Keep reading. Bright, humorous, divorced WM, father (half time), successful professional, 39, nonsmoker, seeking attractive, exciting, fun-loving woman, 25-38, professional, interested in romance, commitment, possibly leading to marriage and family. I am an affectionate, sensitive, passionate man who is playful and sincere, and finds pleasure in getting to know someone, to communicate openly, to hold hands, to be friends and lovers. Enjoy opera, hiking in Big Sur, moonlight walks in the Caribbeian, romantic dinners, scuba diving, as well as taking my daughter to the zoo, and reading her the Secret Garden. Letter and photo appreciated. Guardian Box #3520F.

Asian Women are Beautiful!
Tall, handsome, 31, single WM healthcare professional, seeks truly attractive AF, open and expressive, willing to share varied interests, fun times, romantic adventures, and intimate conversation in creating special relationship. Your letter and photo will get mine. Guardian Box #3801H.

Fun and Serious

You combine humor and passions (tennis, bicycling, travel, theatre, movies, etc.), in an honest and open way. Intellectual stimulation and career are important but so is a balanced life. I am 5'6, single, Jewish, WM, 40, fit, attractive, and ready for relationship. Please include photo. Guardian Box #3439F.

Ready For A Family

Former childcare worker, misses kids and wants relationship with a woman who already has one(s). Physically fit, liberal, bike nut, day person, desires caring, sharing family life. No photo necessary. I'm looking for inner beauty. Guardian Box #3544H.

More Than Just A Hunk!!

I'm also very smart, educated, sophisticated and ethical. I'm a good dancer and tennis player, a terrific musician, and a successful happy professional. I'm a world class hugger with open arms, and a great friend. I'm looking to get serious with a woman, between 25 and 35. POB 2383, Richmond 94802.

Direct, progressive, uncorporate, simple, substantive, single WM, 37, trial lawyer, songwriter, Stanford graduate, seeks commitment with artistic, educated, psychological, somewhat cynical, unrigid, imperfect, sassy woman. Photo required, but will exchange. Box 150, 5337 College Avenue, Oakland, CA 94618.

Assertive, demanding, strong-willed woman needed for this mid-titles passive man. Solvent. 6 feet, 175 lbs, nonsmoker, photo please. Guardian Box #3531F.

Easilygoing, off-beat individual, varied interests. Berkeley single WM, 37, making space for feminine company. Guardian Box #3548F.

Sensitive, humorous, vulnerable but good boundaries, fit, late 30s WM seeks woman 30-40 with self-esteem, fulfilling work, large capacity for intimacy and communicating inner experience, subtle awareness, passionate vision. I'm a therapist, author, mediator, interested in world peace, tantra, environment. Letter/photo appreciated. Guardian Box #3611F.

Authoritative

single WM, 61, tall, not fat, playful, seeks compatible younger woman for unique relationship. Pleasant attitude much more important than looks. Box 692, El Cerrito 94530

Smart Men Foolish Choices

A wise man once said, "It is not uncommon for a man to be suddenly captivated by a woman nearly the opposite of his ideal." So then what does it matter whether you're a base black, or a treble white, 5'2" or 5'9", 22 or 39? I'd rather be captivated by a pretty woman with ideals we can share than captivated by the "ideal" of the perfect woman. Living life without limitations is my key to enjoying life; from adventuring on the slopes of Marin to the tranquility of Zen center. Who am I? For those who have eyes let them see, for those who have ears let them hear and for those who have hearts, I just may be the one who captivates you. BM POB 2382 Sausalito CA 94965.
